Reconstructed Primary Source (Page 2)

The Sabbath was Saturday, not Sunday. The early Christians did not transfer the observance of the seventh day to the first, but added the observance of Sunday to that of Saturday.

Sunday was observed because it was the day on which Christ rose from the dead, and because of the many manifestations of Christ to His disciples on that day. It was, therefore, regarded as the Lord's Day.

In the early centuries, both days were observed; but gradually the observance of the Sabbath declined, while that of Sunday increased, until finally the Sabbath was entirely abandoned by Christians.

It was not until several centuries after Christ that the observance of Sunday was prescribed by law, and that the obligation of keeping holy the Sabbath day was transferred from Saturday to Sunday.

The Church, therefore, in virtue of the authority given to her by Christ, has the power to determine the days of worship, and to prescribe the manner in which they are to be observed.

God simply gave His Church the power to set aside whatever day or days she would deem suitable as holy days. The Church chose Sunday, the first day of the week, and in the course of time added other days as holy days.
