In recent years, the United States government has taken historic steps to examine the phenomenon now known as Unidentified Anomalous Phenomena (UAP). Congressional hearings, military testimony, and intelligence briefings have confirmed that unknown objects operating in restricted airspace have been encountered by trained pilots and detected by advanced sensor systems. For many Americans, these developments raise important scientific and national security questions. However, could there be a spiritual significance to these manifestations?

The Bible speaks extensively about supernatural signs appearing in the heavens near the end of time. Throughout Scripture, believers are warned that extraordinary manifestations—however impressive they may appear—must always be tested against the Word of God.

In 2017, Luis Elizondo, a former Pentagon counterintelligence officer who helped lead the Department of Defense's Advanced Aerospace Threat Identification Program (AATIP), publicly confirmed that the U.S. government had been studying encounters involving unidentified craft displaying extraordinary flight characteristics.

Elizondo described what investigators call the “Five Observables”—a set of flight behaviors repeatedly reported by military personnel that current aerospace technology struggles to explain. These include:

- instantaneous acceleration
- hypersonic velocity without visible propulsion
- low observability or cloaking
- trans-medium travel between air and water
- maneuverability beyond known aircraft capabilities

In 2023, the issue reached the halls of Congress. The United States House of Representatives

One of the most widely discussed incidents occurred in 2004 during operations involving the USS Nimitz Carrier Strike Group. Commander David Fravor, a retired U.S. Navy pilot, described the event during congressional testimony. Radar operators aboard the USS Princeton had been tracking unusual aerial objects for several days before fighter aircraft were directed to investigate.

Fravor recounted seeing a white, Tic-Tac shaped object moving erratically above the ocean before it suddenly accelerated and disappeared at extraordinary speed. His wingman during the event, Lieutenant Commander Alex Dietrich, later confirmed the encounter, stating that the object demonstrated flight behavior unlike anything she had previously observed.

In addition to military pilots, several intelligence officials have also spoken publicly about the phenomenon. David Grusch, a former U.S. Air Force intelligence officer who worked with the National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency and the National Reconnaissance Office, Christopher Mellon, a former Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Intelligence, has also stated that unidentified objects have repeatedly entered restricted military airspace and remain unexplained despite extensive analysis.

others have suggested a different possibility.

In recent years, investigators and officials have increasingly used the term “Non-Human Intelligence” (NHI) when discussing the possibility that these phenomena may involve an intelligence that is not human. This conclusion has not arisen merely from speculation, but from incidents in which trained military pilots encountered objects that appeared to anticipate their movements.

During the well-documented 2004 encounter involving the USS Nimitz Carrier Strike Group, former U.S. Navy Commander David Fravor reported that, after attempting to intercept a Tic-Tac shaped object over the Pacific Ocean, the object suddenly accelerated at extraordinary speed.

Moments later, radar operators informed the pilots that the object had reappeared at the fighters' Combat Air Patrol (CAP) point—a prearranged rendezvous location known only to the pilots and mission controllers.

The fact that the object appeared at the CAP point ahead of the aircraft suggests that, whatever it was, it seemed to anticipate where the pilots were going before they arrived.

The Bible speaks repeatedly about unusual signs appearing in the heavens near the end of time. Nearly two thousand years ago, Jesus warned that extraordinary events would occur in the sky before His return.

These words invite careful reflection. Could some of the unusual phenomena being reported today be connected to the warnings recorded in Scripture? In the following pages, we will examine seven biblical characteristics found in Bible prophecy deceptions and compare them with the phenomena currently being reported around the world.

By examining what the Bible says about the last days, Christians can better understand how to evaluate extraordinary claims and remain grounded in truth during a time when the world may increasingly look to the heavens for answers.

Identifier #1: Signs Appearing in the Heavens

Nearly two thousand years ago, Jesus warned that unusual and troubling signs would appear in the sky near the end of human history.

And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken (Luke 21:25–26).

Jesus also warned of frightening celestial events that would cause people to look toward the sky with concern.

And great earthquakes shall be in divers places, and famines, and pestilences; and fearful sights and great signs shall there be from heaven (Luke 21:11).

Throughout Scripture, significant events in the heavens often accompany moments when God intervenes in human history. One well-known example is the Star of Bethlehem, which appeared at the birth of Christ. This star guided the wise men to the place where Jesus was born.

Some reports describe objects appearing as bright spheres, fiery lights, or luminous craft that move with unusual speed and maneuverability. Perhaps some of these manifestations represent beings rather than machines.

The Bible teaches that the universe is not inhabited by humanity alone. Scripture describes the existence of angels—intelligent spiritual beings who operate within God's creation. However, the Bible also explains that not all angels remained loyal to God. Before the creation of humanity, a rebellion took place in heaven.

And there was war in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels, and prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven. And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him (Revelation 12:7–9).

Scripture describes this rebellion using vivid imagery.

And there appeared another wonder in heaven; and behold a great red dragon, ... and his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and did cast them to the earth (vv. 3–4).

In prophetic language, stars are often used to represent angels. This imagery suggests that a significant number of angels joined Satan's rebellion and were cast out of heaven.

The mystery of the seven stars

thou sawest
in my right hand, and the seven golden candlesticks. The seven stars are the angels of the seven churches: and the seven candlesticks which thou sawest are the seven churches* (Revelation 1:20).

If angels are described symbolically as stars in the heavens and if some of these beings were cast down to the earth, how should we interpret unusual aerial phenomena that appear luminous and break physics but are appearing in the sky today? According to biblical prophecy, supernatural manifestations in the heavens will play an important role in the events leading up to the final crisis of human history.

These increasing reports of mysterious objects and luminous entities appearing in the sky deserve careful examination—not only from a scientific or national security perspective, but also from a biblical one. Because, according to Scripture, signs in the heavens may signal far more than a technological mystery. They may reveal a spiritual reality unfolding on the earth, and the Bible warns that some of those presences come with the intent to deceive.

Identifier #2 Spiritual Influence and False Teachings

The Bible warns that one of the defining characteristics of the last days will not only be unusual signs in the heavens, but also the rise of spiritual influences that lead people away from the truth.

Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils (1 Timothy 4:1).

Scripture predicts that in the

• in some cases, the appearance of entities or apparitions during the night

Whether interpreted as psychological, environmental, or genuinely last days some spiritual manifestations will appear convincing—even helpful—while quietly encouraging beliefs that contradict the teachings of the Bible. Interestingly, some individuals who have studied the UAP and NHI phenomena have reported experiences that resemble paranormal activity rather than encounters involving purely technological craft.

Jim Semivan, a former CIA operations officer who later became involved in researching unidentified aerial phenomena, has spoken publicly about unusual events that he associates with the phenomenon. These reported experiences have included:

- objects moving without cause
- doors opening or closing on their own
- lights turning on or off without explanation
- unexplained disturbances inside the home

supernatural, the similarity between these experiences and reports historically associated with occult manifestations is noteworthy. If some modern encounters associated with unidentified phenomena include experiences that resemble paranormal or occult manifestations, could these events involve more than unidentified technology?

Scripture does not merely say that false teachings will appear—it specifically states that people will be influenced by “seducing spirits.” This suggests that some forms of deception in the last days will not simply be intellectual errors, but physical encounters from spiritual influences that encourage humanity to adopt beliefs that move people from the truth of Scripture.

If this is the case, then the greatest danger may not simply be the appearance of unexplained phenomena, but the ideas and beliefs those phenomena encourage humanity to accept.

Identifier #3: A Warning From Inside the Occult

While modern governments and scientists are only recently beginning to discuss unidentified aerial phenomena openly, one former occult practitioner claimed decades ago that spiritual forces were already planning a future deception that would appear strikingly similar to what many people today interpret as extra-terrestrial contact.

Roger Morneau was once deeply involved in occult practices before becoming a Christian. During his time among occult practitioners, he was warned by a spiritual leader within the community that certain manifestations would one day appear openly to the world.

According to Morneau, the occult leader claimed that spiritual entities would eventually present themselves to humanity in physical form, not as demons or spirits. Instead, they would appear as visitors from other worlds. In a video interview describing these events, Morneau recalled the words he had been told:

“It’s going to be done in a unique manner. This grand plan—people are going to eat this stuff [up]!” Morneau said. “Demon spirits will declare themselves to be inhabitants of far distant planets of the galaxies that are coming to warn the inhabitants of planet Earth of the impending destruction of the planet unless something is done to avoid it.”

According to Morneau, these entities would not appear hostile or threatening. Instead, they would present themselves as concerned benefactors of humanity, offering guidance to help the world avoid catastrophe. He continued describing what he had been told by his occult priest:

"The spirits will show themselves willing to give valuable guidance that will not only help people avoid the destruction of the planet, but it will cause it to enter into a higher state of existence. They will promise that if their recommendations are followed carefully, they will usher in a glorious new age of peace and prosperity.

There will be no more wars, no more famines, no more social unrest. Neighbor will love neighbor, and there will be perfect happiness for a thousand years."

Morneau was told that humanity would be encouraged to follow the guidance of these beings in order to bring about a new era of global unity and peace. In modern spiritual movements, this concept is sometimes described as the arrival of a new age for humanity—often referred to as the "Age of Aquarius."

To many people, the promise of global peace, harmony, and higher spiritual enlightenment may sound appealing, but the Bible warns that not every promise of peace originates from God. In fact, Scripture repeatedly cautions believers that spiritual deception in the last days will often appear benevolent and persuasive. According to Morneau, one of their central promises would be the arrival of a thousand years of peace on Earth. Yet when we turn to Scripture, the Bible presents a very different picture of the events surrounding the return of Christ and the millennium.

Rather than describing a peaceful global age before Christ's return, the Bible warns that the world will experience increasing deception and conflict leading up to the final events of human history. To understand this UAP issue, we must examine what the Bible actually teaches about the millennium.

Identifier #4: The Promise of a Thousand Years of Peace

Throughout history, many religious and philosophical movements have predicted the arrival of a future golden age of global peace—a time when war, famine, and conflict would disappear and humanity would enter a new era of harmony and prosperity. In modern spiritual movements, this idea is often described as a coming “new age” for humanity. According to some interpretations of unidentified aerial phenomena, advanced beings may one day guide humanity into a period of worldwide unity and peace. But when we examine the teachings of Jesus carefully, the Bible presents a very different picture of the events leading up to His return. In one of His most well-known parables, Jesus described the world as a field containing both wheat and tares—symbolizing the coexistence of good and evil in human society.

Let both grow together until the harvest: and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them: but gather the wheat into my barn (Matthew 13:30).

Later in the same chapter, Jesus explained the meaning of this parable.

The enemy that sowed them is the devil; the harvest is the end of the world; and the reapers are the angels. As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world (vv. 39–40).

According to Jesus, both righteousness and wickedness will continue to exist, side by side, until the end of the age, when the final harvest takes place at His return. This teaching is significant because it challenges the idea that humanity will gradually enter a long period of global peace before Christ returns.

If both the wheat and the tares remain together until the harvest, then the Bible does not describe a future era in which evil disappears while history continues normally on Earth. Jesus also warned that conditions on Earth near the time of His return would resemble the moral climate of the ancient world before the Flood.

But as the days of Noe [Noah] were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be (Matthew 24:37).

The days of Noah were not marked by universal peace and harmony. Instead, they were characterized by widespread corruption, violence, and spiritual confusion. Taken together, these teachings suggest that the world will not gradually evolve into a peaceful global civilization before Christ returns. Instead, the Bible warns that humanity will continue to struggle with deception, conflict, and moral division until the moment when Christ intervenes in human history.

This makes the promise of a coming earthly golden age an important claim to examine carefully. Because if a future spiritual movement—or even a non-human intelligence—promises to guide humanity into a thousand years of peace on Earth, that promise would stand in direct tension with the timeline that Jesus Himself described.

If the Bible does not predict a global age of peace before Christ's return, why do so many modern spiritual movements—and even some alleged extraterrestrial encounters—promote exactly that message? The Scriptures give a simple test for evaluating any spiritual claim.

To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them (Isaiah 8:20).

No matter how advanced a message may sound, how impressive the signs may appear, or how peaceful the promises may seem, the Bible remains the standard by which every spiritual message must be tested. If the message does not agree with Scripture, the Bible's conclusion is clear: "There is no light in them."

But what makes this warning even more remarkable is that some Christian researchers studying UFO encounters have already noticed a disturbing pattern in the messages these entities communicate. And one of the most experienced investigators is Joe Jordan.

Identifier #5: Messages That Contradict the Gospel

As reports of unidentified aerial phenomena have increased, some researchers have begun examining not only the physical characteristics of these encounters, but also the messages communicated during alleged contact experiences.

One investigator who has spent decades studying this aspect of the phenomenon is Joseph Jordan. Jordan is a Christian researcher who spent more than thirty years investigating UFO sightings and abduction experiences. Earlier in his career, he served as a section director within the Mutual UFO Network (MUFON), one of the largest civilian organizations dedicated to documenting and analyzing UFO reports.

Over time, Jordan noticed a consistent pattern among individuals who claimed encounters with extraterrestrial beings. According to his research, many of these experiences involve specific teachings about humanity, religion, and the nature of reality.

What he found was surprising. The messages reportedly communicated by these entities often conflict directly with the teachings of the Bible.

1. Attacks on Christianity and the Gospel

Jordan reports that many individuals who describe alien encounters say the beings frequently challenge the core claims of Christianity.

According to these accounts, the entities sometimes claim that:

- Jesus was not the Son of God, but merely a teacher or enlightened human.
- Christianity is a misunderstanding created by early cultures.
- All religions are equally valid paths to spiritual enlightenment.

Such ideas directly contradict the message of the New Testament.

Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me (John 14:6).

The Bible consistently teaches that the gospel of Christ is not one spiritual option among many, but the central truth through which humanity is reconciled to God. The apostle Paul even warned believers that alternative spiritual messages might appear that resemble the gospel while ultimately leading people away from it.

But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed (Galatians 1:8).

This warning becomes especially striking when we consider modern claims involving beings that appear to descend from the sky while delivering teachings that contradict the gospel message.

2. Claims That Humans Were Created by Extraterrestrials

Another theme Jordan observed in many reported encounters is the claim that extraterrestrial civilizations created or genetically engineered humanity. In some accounts, these beings describe themselves as advanced scientists who seeded life on Earth long ago and are now returning to guide humanity's development, but this idea stands in direct contradiction to the biblical account of creation.

So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them (Genesis 1:27).

The Bible teaches that humanity was not engineered by advanced beings but intentionally created by God Himself. According to Scripture, human life reflects the image and purpose of the Creator. When supernatural encounters begin promoting ideas that redefine humanity's origin, Christians must evaluate those claims carefully in light of what Scripture teaches.

Jordan discovered something even more unusual while interviewing individuals who reported alien encounters. In a number of cases, experiencers claimed that human figures appeared during these encounters—figures they recognized as deceased relatives or people who had already died. According to the witnesses, these figures appeared alongside the alleged extraterrestrial beings. The deceased spoke to them or acted as guides during the experience. What exactly is happening here? The answer to that question may reveal one of the most important clues to understanding the true nature of the phenomenon.

Identifier #6

The Dead Know Nothing

One of the most important questions, when evaluating supernatural encounters, is a simple one: What does the Bible say about death? Many Christians believe that when a person dies, their soul immediately goes to heaven or hell where they remain conscious. Because of this belief, some people conclude that it may be possible for deceased loved ones to appear to the living.

However, when we examine the Bible carefully, a different picture begins to emerge. The Scriptures consistently describe death as a state of unconscious rest, not active life.

For the living know that they shall die: but the dead know not any thing, neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten (Ecclesiastes 9:5).

According to this passage, the dead are unaware of events occurring on Earth. They are not communicating with the living, nor guiding human affairs, or observing what is happening in the world. Instead, the Bible frequently compares death to sleep, a temporary state that lasts until the resurrection.

Our friend Lazarus sleepeth; but I go, that I may awake him out of sleep. ... Then said Jesus unto them plainly, Lazarus is dead (John 11:11–14).

Jesus Himself used the language of sleep to describe death, emphasizing that it is a condition from which people will one day awaken. However, some Christians point to passages that appear to suggest the dead are conscious. It is important to examine these carefully.

For example, the apostle Paul wrote:

To be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord (2 Corinthians 5:8).

It's important to note that this actually says nothing about death. Paul was expressing his desire to be with Christ, which ultimately happens at the resurrection. In another passage, he explained when believers actually receive immortality.

In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump ... the dead shall be raised incorruptible (1 Corinthians 15:52).

According to Paul, believers receive immortality when the dead are raised at Christ's return—not immediately at the moment of death. Yet, another passage often discussed is the story of the rich man and Lazarus.

The rich man also died, and was buried; and in hell he lift up his eyes ... (Luke 16:22–23).

Many scholars recognize this passage as a parable, using symbolic imagery to teach moral lessons about justice and accountability. The Bible contains many parables that use symbolic settings rather than literal descriptions of the afterlife. But to assume this passage is literal is to also assume that a drop of water cools a tongue in hell.

Send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue (v. 4).

In the broader testimony of Scripture, death is consistently described as a state of rest until the resurrection. Because the dead are not conscious, God repeatedly warned His people not to attempt communication with them. Practices that sought contact with the dead were known in the ancient world as necromancy.

There shall not be found among you any one that ... useth divination, ... or an enchanter ... or a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer. For all that do these things are an abomination unto the Lord (Deuteronomy 18:10–12).

The Bible also warns against interacting with familiar spirits.

Regard not them that have familiar spirits, neither seek after wizards, to be defiled by them: I am the Lord your God (Leviticus 19:31).

The phrase familiar spirits refers to spiritual entities that appear recognizable ment, God warned the Israelites not to adopt the spiritual practices of surrounding pagan cultures. Many of those religions believed their gods were actually the spirits of the dead guiding the living.

They joined themselves also unto Baalpeor, and ate the sacrifices of the dead (Psalm 106:28).

The New Testament clarifies the true nature of these manifestations.

But I say, that the things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils, and not to God (1 Corinthians 10:20).

In other words, the Bible teaches that these spiritual manifestations were not or familiar. They often impersonate deceased individuals or trusted figures in order to gain a person's confidence.

Throughout the Old Testa-truly deceased humans at all, but deceptive spirits presenting themselves as such. If the dead truly "know not anything," as Scripture states, then any entity claiming to be a deceased person cannot actually be that individual. Instead, it would represent a spiritual impersonation.

This becomes especially significant when we consider modern reports in which individuals claim that deceased relatives appear during encounters with non-human entities. If the Bible is correct about the condition of the dead, then those appearances cannot be genuine communication with departed loved ones. They would represent something else entirely. And according to biblical prophecy, such deceptive manifestations will play a role in the final events of human history.

For they are the spirits of devils, working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth and of the whole world (Revelation 16:14).

These spirits perform supernatural signs capable of influencing leaders and populations across the entire world.

Additional Questions Often Raised About Death

Because the Bible's description of death as a state of unconscious rest is unfamiliar to most modern Christians, several passages are cited as evidence that the dead are conscious.

It is helpful to examine these passages carefully.

The Thief on the Cross

And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, today shalt thou be with me in paradise (Luke 23:43).

Many readers assume this means the thief entered heaven that very day. However, punctuation did not exist in the earliest Greek manuscripts of the New Testament. The placement of the comma in English translations affects the meaning.

The statement can also be read as:

Verily I say unto thee today, thou shalt be with me in paradise. (Luke 23:43)

In this case, Jesus was emphasizing the certainty of the promise, not the timing of its fulfillment. This interpretation aligns with another important detail: According to the Gospel of John, Jesus Himself had not yet ascended to heaven on the Sunday after His resurrection. He told Mary, Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father (John 20:17).

If Christ had not yet ascended to heaven on Sunday morning, then the promise to the thief clearly referred to a future resurrection, not an immediate entrance into paradise.

The Souls Under the Altar

Another passage appears in the book of Revelation.

I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God.

... And they cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord ... (Revelation 6:9–10).

At first glance, this imagery might appear to describe conscious souls in heaven. However, Revelation is a highly symbolic, prophetic book filled with symbolic imagery—beasts, dragons, horns, and other figures representing spiritual realities. This scene echoes an earlier passage in the Bible.

The voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground (Genesis 4:10).

Abel's blood was not literally speaking but symbolically represented a cry for justice. In the same way, the "souls under the altar" represent the faithful martyrs whose deaths call out for God's justice to be fulfilled.

Moses and Elijah at the Transfiguration

Another question sometimes raised involves the appearance of Moses and Elijah when Jesus was transfigured before His disciples.

And, behold, there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with him (Matthew 17:3).

However, this event does not contradict the biblical teaching about death. Elijah never experienced death at all. He was taken to heaven alive.

And Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven (2 Kings 2:11).

Moses, on the other hand, may have been resurrected. The book of Jude refers to a dispute involving Moses' body.

Michael the archangel, when contending with the devil he disputed about the body of Moses ... (Jude 1:9).

This passage suggests that Moses may have been raised from the dead as a special case. If so, the appearance of Moses and Elijah at the Transfiguration would represent two types of redeemed believers—those resurrected from the dead and those translated without seeing death.

Samuel and the Witch of Endor

Another passage sometimes discussed involves King Saul consulting a medium at Endor in 1 Samuel 28. In this story, a figure, which appeared to be Samuel, spoke to Saul. However, this event occurred after God had already refused to communicate with Saul.

And when Saul enquired of the Lord, the Lord answered him not (1 Samuel 28:6).

God had also clearly forbidden necromancy. If God refused to answer Saul and had already condemned the practice of contacting the dead, it would be inconsistent for Him to suddenly allow Samuel to appear through a forbidden practice.

For this reason, many interpreters understand the apparition to be a deceptive spirit impersonating Samuel rather than the prophet himself.

The Consistent Testimony of Scripture About Death

When all the passages of the Bible are considered together, a consistent picture emerges regarding the condition of the dead. According to Scripture, death is not a transition into an immediate conscious existence in a higher form of life or another realm. Instead, it is a temporary state of rest until the resurrection.

The Bible repeatedly describes what happens when a person dies.

After death, a person:

1. Returns to dust:

Thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust (Psalm 104:29).

2. Knows nothing:

For the living know that they shall die: but the dead know not any thing (Ecclesiastes 9:5).

3. Possesses no mental activity:

His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish (Psalm 146:4).

4. Has no involvement with events on Earth:

Also their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished (Ecclesiastes 9:6).

5. Does not continue living:

Set thine house in order; for thou shalt die, and not live (2 Kings 20:1).

6. Waits in the grave:

If I wait, the grave is mine house (Job 17:13).

7. Passes away like a fading shadow:

Man that is born of a woman is of few days. ... He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down (Job 14:1–2).

Taken together, these passages describe death as a state of complete unconscious rest until the resurrection promised at the return of Christ.

If the dead truly “know not anything” and if their thoughts perish when they die, then any entity claiming to be a deceased human cannot actually be that person. So who—or what—are these entities that appear to people in visions, paranormal encounters, and even some reported alien experiences?

The Bible suggests that this type of deception is not new. In fact, the very first lie recorded in Scripture involved the question of what happens after death.

In the Garden of Eden, God warned Adam and Eve that disobedience would lead to death. But the serpent offered a different message.

And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die (Genesis 3:4).

From the very beginning, the central claim of the serpent was that human beings do not truly die—that some part of them continues living after death. If that belief is accepted, then it becomes possible for deceptive spirits to appear in the likeness of the dead and be welcomed as departed loved ones, spiritual guides, or messengers from beyond. In this way, the same lie that began in Eden can be used again to deceive humanity. And if supernatural entities can successfully convince people that the dead are still alive, they gain a powerful tool for influencing human belief, behavior, and even global events.

If such manifestations are part of a larger deception, then the extraordinary phenomena now being reported in the skies—and the messages associated with them—may represent something far more significant than a mystery of technology or science. They may represent the continuation of a deception that began in Eden and will reach its climax in the final events of human history.

Identifier #7: Deceptive Miraculous Signs

One of the clearest reasons Christians must test the UFO, or UAP, phenomenon by Scripture is that some of its most influential modern “miracle” stories do not merely involve lights in the sky. They involve healings, spiritual beings, prophetic messages, and religious reinterpretation.

A major example is Chris Bledsoe. In his book, UFO of God, presents his experiences as a spiritual journey involving “missing time, clouds of fire, healings, and transformation.” His official website says that his 2007 encounter drew the attention of “scientists, intelligence officials, and researchers,” and even frames his message with the statement, “A new knowledge has arrived. Mankind must awaken to it.”

According to Bledsoe’s public account, he was healed of Crohn’s disease after his 2007 encounter, and he later claimed ongoing encounters with luminous orbs and a radiant female being he calls “the Lady.” In a recent interview, he said the being granted him the ability to share her presence with others. He described further healing connected to his experiences.

At first glance, that sounds persuasive to many Christians. After all, Jesus healed people. But Scripture never teaches that a miracle by itself proves divine approval. Jesus explicitly warned that in the last days false christs and false prophets would show “great signs and wonders.” Paul warned of “power and signs and lying wonders.” Revelation says the final deception will use miracles to deceive the world. We can read about it in the following verses:

For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect (Matthew 24:24).

Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish (2 Thessalonians 2:9–10).

And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men, and deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do (Revelation 13:13–14).

So the biblical question is not merely, “Did something unusual happen?” The real question is, “Does the being, the message, and the spiritual fruit agree with Scripture?”

Bledsoe’s account becomes even more problematic when he describes the entity itself. In his interview, he said the force that came toward him revealed itself as “the most beautiful woman” he had ever seen. He also said she identified herself with multiple names from different religions and cultures, including Hathor, Diana, Demeter, Hera, and the White Buffalo Calf Woman.

THAT MATTERS.

In the Bible, when angels appear visibly to humans, they are ordinarily described in male form, not as goddess-like female apparitions. Abraham’s visitors are described as “men” (Genesis 18:2). The angels at Sodom are described as “two angels” who appear as men (Genesis 19:1, 5). At the tomb, the angel is described as a “young man” (Mark 16:5). After the resurrection, two heavenly messengers stood in “shining garments” and are described in masculine terms (Luke 24:4). At the ascension, “two men stood by them in white apparel” (Acts 1:10).

That does not prove a deceptive spirit could not appear as a woman. It does show that Bledsoe’s “Lady” does not resemble the ordinary pattern of angelic appearance in Scripture.

Even more important, biblical angels do not identify themselves as pagan deities.

Bledsoe said the being told him she was called Hathor in Egypt. Britannica identifies Hathor as an ancient Egyptian goddess associated with the sky, women, fertility, love, and the region of the dead. That should immediately concern any Bible-believing Christian.

The Bible never presents the gods of the nations as alternate names for God’s holy messengers. It condemns pagan worship and forbids God’s people from learning the ways of other religions so they won't blend their practices with the worship of the true God.

The Bible says:

Thou shalt have no other gods before me (Exodus 20:3).

Take heed to thyself that thou be not snared by following them... and that thou enquire not after their gods, saying, How did these nations serve their gods? even so will I do likewise. Thou shalt not do so unto the Lord thy God (Deuteronomy 12:30, 31).

The New Testament is even clearer about the spiritual reality behind pagan worship. First Corinthians says, But I say, that the things which the Gentiles sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils, and not to God (1 Corinthians 10:20).

So if a being presents itself under the name of an Egyptian goddess, know that what the Bible categorizes it as is not flattering. Scripture does not tell Christians to interpret what they say or do as a fresh revelation of the Holy Spirit. It tells them to reject pagan spiritual claims and test every spirit by the Word of God.

There is another detail here that is hard to ignore. Jeremiah condemns worship directed toward the “queen of heaven.”

The children gather wood, and the fathers kindle the fire, and the women knead their dough, to make cakes to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto other gods, that they may provoke me to anger (Jeremiah 7:18).

I would be careful not to say the Bible explicitly names Hathor here because it does not. But it does show that Scripture treats feminine heavenly goddess devotion as part of a false religious system, not as a valid expression of biblical faith.

Bledsoe says that the being had “many names” across many cultures and religions. That is a form of religious syncretism. The Bible does not teach that truth is scattered among many goddesses and unified later into one spiritual mother figure. The Bible teaches exclusivity in both the identity of God and the identity of Christ.

Note the following verses:

Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me (John 14:6).

Neither is there salvation in any other (Acts 4:12).

A being that blends Hathor, Diana, Demeter, Hera, and Marian-type (mother Mary apparitions) imagery is not speaking the language of biblical revelation. It is speaking the language of universal spirituality.

That concern is strengthened by Bledsoe's own framing. His website says, "A new knowledge has arrived. Mankind must awaken to it."

In an interview, he said the entities would reveal themselves to "change the consciousness of people" and mark "the beginning of a new era, a new knowledge."

That sounds far more like New Age awakening than the gospel preached by Christ and the apostles.

The apostles did not preach

a new consciousness.

They preached repentance, the cross, the resurrection, and salvation through Jesus Christ.

But by far the most telling characteristic is miracles that seem to be healings. This is where many Christians can be caught off guard. A healing story is emotionally powerful. It lowers defenses. It makes people think, Surely this must be from God! But the Bible repeatedly warns that miraculous powers can be used in the service of deception. Even in the Old Testament, Pharaoh's magicians duplicated some of the signs Moses performed (Exodus 7:11, 22). In the New Testament, warns of deceptive wonders. Paul warns of lying wonders. Revelation warns of miracles that persuade the world. A healing, by itself, is therefore not enough.

If a being seems compassionate but promotes unbiblical spiritual categories, then that kindness is not proof of holiness. If it appears beautiful but identifies itself with pagan religion, then that beauty is not proof of truth. If it performs a sign but moves people toward mystical awakening rather than toward the unique lordship of Jesus Christ, then Christians are not free to trust it.

The deeper biblical pattern is that Satan does not merely oppose God openly. He seeks to imitate God so convincingly that people will trust the counterfeit. He says, I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will be like the most High (Isaiah 14:14).

The Bible adds this warning: And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light (2 Corinthians 11:14).

That is exactly why a story like Bledsoe's deserves caution.

It contains many elements that can powerfully disarm discernment:

- lights in the sky
- healings
- spiritual comfort
- feminine divine imagery
- promises of awakening
- a message that transcends traditional Christian boundaries

From a biblical standpoint, that combination is not reassuring. It is precisely the sort of package that deception would use if its goal were to bypass doctrinal caution and appeal directly to wonder, emotion, and mystical hunger.

Final Reflection: Connecting the Pattern

When the accounts discussed in this booklet are considered together, a striking pattern begins to emerge.

Roger Morneau, a former occultist who later became a Christian, warned that spiritual forces had long discussed a plan to reveal themselves to the world while presenting themselves as beings from other planets.

Joe Jordan, a Christian researcher and former director within the UFO research community, has spent decades studying alien abduction claims and has documented repeated reports of entities delivering messages that contradict the gospel of Jesus Christ.

More recently, individuals such as Chris Bledsoe have described encounters with mysterious luminous objects and spiritual beings that appear to perform healings or communicate spiritual guidance.

At first glance, these accounts may seem unrelated. Some appear technological. Others appear mystical. Still others appear religious. But all of these are meant to deceive. The Bible warned that such events would occur before the end of human history.

Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, And with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved (2 Thessalonians 2:9–10).

According to Scripture, the final deception will not rely merely on false teachings. It will involve extraordinary signs and wonders capable of persuading much of the world. But the Bible also gives believers a clear standard for evaluating every spiritual claim.

To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them

(Isaiah 8:20).

No matter how impressive a manifestation may appear—whether it comes through spiritual encounters, miraculous experiences, or phenomena in the sky—its message must be measured against the truth revealed in Scripture. The Bible points to one Person as the ultimate standard of truth.

Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me (John 14:6).

For Christians, the question is not simply whether unexplained phenomena exist. The deeper question is this: Do these manifestations lead humanity toward Jesus Christ—or away from Him? According to the Bible, the answer to that question may reveal whether a phenomenon is a genuine revelation of truth or part of the final deception foretold in Scripture.

The greatest deception in history will not be obvious evil, but a supernatural message that appears good while leading the world away from the truth of Christ.

Supporting This Work

This booklet is part of a broader effort through Orion Media Ministry, which grew out of the Christian podcast Strange Normal.

All support is deeply appreciated and helps expand the reach of this message.

History shows that the most important moments often arrive quietly, long before people fully recognize their significance. For Christians, the most important preparation is not simply understanding prophecy—it is knowing Christ personally.

And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure (1 John 3:3).

Whatever extraordinary events may unfold in the future, one truth remains certain: Those who remain anchored in Christ will not be led astray. That is the most important preparation any of us can make.

Thank you for taking the time to read this booklet.

It was written with the hope that it would encourage you to look beyond the surface of what we're seeing in the world today and to examine these things through the lens of Scripture. We are living in a time where information is increasing, voices are multiplying, and not everything is what it appears to be. More than ever, discernment matters.

My prayer is that this has not only informed you, but also strengthened your desire to stay rooted in God's Word, to test all things carefully, and to hold fast to what is true.

If this message resonated with you, I would like to personally invite you to continue this journey with me. Each week on YouTube, through the Strange Normal podcast, we take a deeper look at current events, cultural shifts, and unusual phenomena—all examined through the framework of Bible prophecy and the great controversy between truth and deception.

You don't have to navigate these questions alone.

You are always welcome to join us.

What if the greatest deception in history is already underway?

Reports of unidentified aerial phenomena are increasing. Military pilots, government officials, and global leaders are openly acknowledging encounters with what they call “non-human intelligence.”

But what are they really seeing?

This booklet examines these phenomena through the lens of Scripture—not speculation. From ancient biblical accounts to modern testimonies, a consistent pattern emerges.

The Bible warns of a final deception so convincing that it will deceive almost the entire world. Could these manifestations be part of that warning?

This is not a book about fear.
It is a call to discernment.

— Inside, you'll explore:

- Signs appearing in the heavens
- Spiritual influence and false teachings
- Warnings from inside the occult
- The promise of a false peace
- Messages that contradict the Gospel
- What Scripture says about the dead
- How to test deceptive miracles
