

A briefe polemicall dissertation, concerning the true time of the inchoation and determination of the Lordsday-Sabbath.
Wherein is clearly and irrefragably manifested by Scripture,
reason, authorities, in all ages till this present:
that the Lordsday

begins and ends at evening; and ought to be solemnized from evening to evening: against the novel errors, mistakes of such, who groundlesly assert; that it begins and ends at midnight, or day-breaking; and ought to be sanctified from midnight to midnight, or morning to morning:

whose arguments are here examined, refuted as unsound, absurd, frivolous.
Compiled in the Tower of London, and now published, for the information, reformation of all contrary judgment or practise. By William Prynne of Swainswick Esq;.

Author: Prynne, William, 1600-1669.
1654

OXFORD TEXT ARCHIVE

OTA Home | Text Creation Partnership

To the Christian Reader.

A Brief Polemicall
Dissertation concerning THE TRUE TIME of the INCHOATION AND DETERMINATION of the LORDS-DAY.

Errata.

This material was created by the Text Creation Partnership in partnership with ProQuest's Early English Books Online, Gale Cengage's Eighteenth Century Collections Online, and Readex's Evans Early American Imprints.

[Page] A BRIEFE POLEMICALL DISSERTATION, concerning the true Time of the INCHOATION and DETERMINATION OF THE LORDS DAY-SABBATH.

Wherein is clearly and irrefragably manifested by Scripture, Reason, Authorities, in all Ages till this present: that the Lordsday begins and ends at Evening; and ought to be solemnized from Evening to Evening: against the Novel Errours, Mistakes of such, who groundlesly assert; that it begins and ends at Midnight, or day-breaking, and ought to be sanctified from Midnight to Midnight, or Morning to Morning: whose Arguments are here examined, refuted as unsound, absurd, frivolous.

Compiled in the Tower of London, and now Published, for the Information, Reformation of all contrary Judgment or Practise.

By WILLIAM PRYNNE of Swainswick Esq.

Levit. 22. 32. From Even to Even shall yee rest, or Celebrate your Sabbath.

Capitula Caroli & Ludovici Imperatorum lib. 6. cap. 186. 202. Diem Dominicum secundum Reverentiam colite; Opus servile, id est, Agrum, pratum, viniam, vel si qua graviora sunt, in eo non faciatis; nec causas, nec calumnias inter vos ditatis, sed tantum divinis cultibus serviatis, & a vespera ad vesperā dies Dominicus servetur: Placuit ut fideles Diem Dominicum, in quo Dominus resurrexit, omnes venerabiliter colant. Nam si Pagani, ob memoriam & Reverentiam Deorum suorum quosdam dies colunt, & Judaei more carnali Sabbatum carnaliter observant, quanto magis iste dies à Christianis honorifice colendus est, ne in illo sancto die vanis fabulis, aut locutionibus, sive cantationibus vel Saltationibus, aut divisionibus, stando in biviis & plateis, ut solet, in serviant: sed ad Sacerdotem, aut ad aliquom Sapientem hominem & veniant, & eorum praedicationibus & bonis locutionibus, quae ad animam pertinent, utantur, & illo die seu Sabbato ad Vesperas, & ad Matutinas, sive ad Missam cum eorum oblationibus, si fieri potest, omnes cavendo, Kyrie eleision, decantent. Similiter Pastores pecorum eundo & redeundo in campum, & ad domum faciant, ut omnes eos verè Christianos, & devotes cognostant.

LONDON, Printed by T. Mabb for Edward Thomas dwelling in Green Arbour, 1655.

[Page]

[Page]

To the Christian Reader.

Kinde Reader, Give me leave to inform thee of the true Original cause impelling me to compile this Dissertation at least 20 years since, whiles a Prisoner in the Tower of London.

When I was a Student and Puny Barrester in Lincolns Inne, it was the constant custome of that House and all other Inns of Court from All-Saints Eve, to Candlemas night, to keep open Revels, Dancing, Dicing and Musick in their Hals ever Saturday night (as we usually call it) till eleven or twelve of the clock, and many times till 4. in the morning or later; by reason of which abuse, the Lordsday was much prophaned, and God publike Ordinances on the Lordsday morning, neglected, by the Revellers, Students, Officers, Gamesters, Musicians and Spectators, who slept out the Forenoon Sermons and other divine Exercises for the most part, either in their Beds or at Church, if they resorted to it: Which being a great corasive to my Spirit, grief to my heart, and scandall to many Religious Lawyers, Students and our Lecturers. I used my best endeavours to reform this long continued abuse; and by my interest in some pious Benchers of Lincolns Inne, procured them by an Order of Counsel to suppress all publike Gaming and Dicing in the Hall, with all Grand Christmasses and disorders on that abused Season; and likewise to restrain the length of their Revels on Saturday nights, by confining them to a certain houre, though they could not totally suppress them, as they and I desired, being over ruled therein by the majority of the Benchers, pleading long prescription, custome, and unwillingness: to displease the Revellers and young Students, for their continuance: Whereupon I did in my Histriomastix printed 1632. (Dedicated to the Benchers of Lincolns Inne) produce the Decrees, Laws, Statutes, Canons of many Christian Emperours, Kings, States, Councils, and Resolutions of Fathers, Casuists, Schoolmen, and Protestant Divines

See the epistle Dedicatory.

Forraign and Domestick, to prove the unlawfulness of Stage Plays, Revels, Dancing, Gaming, Sports, and Pastimes on the Lordsday, and on Saturday nights, (as we usually stiled them) proving at large page 638. to 647. by sundry Reasons and Authorities in all ages (there cited) and likewise in the Table: That the Lordsday begins Saturday Evening, not at Morning or Midnight following; that so, I might in point of Conscience, suppress all Revels, Gaming and disorders used [Page] in our Innes of Court and elsewhere throughout the Realm, on Saturday nights, being part of the Lords own dayes, fit to be spent in better exercises of Piety and devotion.

This Assertion of the Lordsdays inception at Evening, being contrary to the received Opinion of most of our Modern Writers and Divines, was looked upon as a strange novelty by many, as well as my Histriom [...]stix, and censure of Stage Playes as unlawfull, unchristian Pastimes; for which (though licensed by Archbishop Abhots Chaplain) I was committed Prisoner to the Tower of London by the Lords of the Councill, Febr. 1. 1632. and afterwards severely censured in the Starre Chamber, for it, as scandalous to the King, Queen, Court, State through Lawds and others malice and prevailing Power; which Sentence was since reversed by the unanimous Vote of both Houses of Parliament, as illegal and given without any cause at all.

b See a New Discovery of the Prelates tyranny,
[...]. 1. &c

Hereupon for the satisfaction of some Christian Friends as well Lawyers as Divines, who scrupelled this Opinion of the Lordsday [...]s Evening Inchoa [...]ion (though they could not answer, nor deny the Reasons and Authorities there produced by me, for its justification) I did in the year 1633. compile this Dissertation, in the Tower [...] which I communicated to my learned friends of the Law and Ministry, who professed themselves abundantly satisfied with it; some of them transcribing Copies thereof for their private use. After which, to passe my Solitary Prison houres with as much publike benefit, as I could, I went through all the Controversies touching the Sabboath, Lordsday, and more especially concerning the use of Pastimes on it; which the Kings (or rather Lawds) Declaration for Sports, occasioned; and Bishop White, Dr. Heylin, Dr. Pocklington, and others had then raised, debated in their Discours [...]s, and Histories of the Sabbath; with an intention to have published them at that Season. But the Printing Presses being locked up and strictly watched by Lawd and the Bishops then swaying, against all Treatises of this Subject in opposition to the Anti-Sabbatarian Pamphlets, I was necessitated to lay them by for that season, and to communicate some of them to such friends, who made use of them in some of their printed Discourses of the Sabboath, and Lordsday, since the Prelates power was Ecclipsed: Onely I then contenting my selfe with a Preface to my brother Burtons Divine Tragedy, or Examples of Gods [Page] Judgments upon Sabbath-breakers; and some necessary Additions to the Second Impression of his Dialogue between A. and B. concerning the Sabbaths Morality, and unlawfulnesse of Pastimes on the Lordsday, both printed in the year 1636. beyond the Seas, to the great satisfaction of godly Christians. After which, Gods Providence diverted my Thoughts and Studies to other seasonable Subjects and Publications, against our Lordly Prelates pretended Divine Right, Popish Innovations, Usurpations on the Kings Prerogative, and Peoples Liberties, Treasons, Schismes in all ages, which occasioned their downfall not long after. These wily Foxes being unable to answer my Books against them, thereupon by A Second unrighteous Tyrannical Censure in Star-chamber, and extravagant Councel Table Orders sent me close Prisoner, first to Carnarvan Castle in Northwales, and from thence to Mountorgueil Castle in Jersey, debarring me the liberty of Pen, Ink, Paper, Books, accesse of friends, and all humane conversation, to hinder me from writing; seised all my Books, Writings, Papers they could meet with, searching divers of my friends houses as well as my Chamber and Study for that end: Yet God [...] Providence preserved this small Treatise (with some others touching the Sabbath Lordsday, and unlawfulnesse of Sports or Pastimes on them, against which I mustered up the concurrent opions of Fathers, Councils, Christian Emperours, Princes Edicts, Popish, Protestant Writers of all sorts in all Ages, yet unpublished) from their Clutches, and the strict Seaches of other late Grandees since; and brought them safe to my hands again, when I deemed them quite lost. Whereupon, conceiving it agreeable to Gods good pleasure (who miraculously preserved this Dissertation above twenty years space, during all my Troubles, and amidst our publique Wars and revolutions) that it should be made Publike for the Information and benefit of his Church, People, and not be buried in Oblivion; and being the onely compleat Treatise of this Subject, I ever yet beard off; which others have but briefly, slightly touched, rather then HANDLED in their Discourses os the Sabbath or LORDSDAY; I thereupon resolved to make it publike, and committed it to the Presse, in this Sceptic all age, when too many Divines, as [Page] well (as Jesuits and Sectaries) make it the main part of their Divinity and Religion, to vent and cry up New, empty, frothy notions, Whimsies, fancies, old forgotten Herefies, and uncouth conceipts, in a kinde of new canting language, (which themselves and others hardly understand) to draw away disciples after them, and undermine those ancient settled truths and Principles of Religion, which all Orthodox Christians in former ages have constantly believed, received, practised without dispute; which hath produced very sad effects, eaten

See my unbi-shoping of Timothy and Titus; Breviate, Qu [...]Inch-coal, Catalogue of testimonies in all agres, Quaeries to Bishops, Instructions for Churchwardens. A Looking Glasse for all Lordly Prelates. Antipathy, Appendix to Flagellum Pontifiess. Re-monstrance against ship monny, with some others not yet printed.

A New Discovery of the Prelates tyranny.

See Thoms Campanella de Monarchia Hispaniae

[...]ut the sinew, Practise of Piety; the life Power of Godliness, as well as the form thereof, and made many sorward professors heretofore Seekers, Self-seekers, Sc [...]pticks, Anti-Scripturists, Ranters, Nullisidians, Hereticks, Separatists, Blasphemers, Covenant-breakers, Antinomians, (trampling all laws of God and men under feet like dirt) and some professed Atheists as well as Anarchists. To prevent which mischiefs for the future, I shall recommend this advise of the Apostle to all sincere Christians, 1 John 4. 1. Beloved believe not every spirit, but try the spirits (by the word of God) whether they are of God; because many false Prophets are (now) gone out into the world. Preferre ancient Truth, before new pretended light, as most do old wine before new. Illud verius, quod Antiquius: And if so, then they need not doubt, but in this Controversie, I have the truth on my side, because all Antiquity concurs unanimously with me, as well as the Scriptures. I shall conclude with Jer. 6. 16. Thus saith the Lord, stand yee in the wayes and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye sholl find rest to your Souls. And though many now say (as the obstinate Israelites did then to God) we will not walk therein: yet I trust all the true Saints and Servants of God, will readily obey this divine and safe command in these pe [...]illous times of novelty, desperate Apostacy, and Antichristian Pride, when too many oppose and exalt themselves, above all that is called God, or that is worshipped, obeying no Laws of God or man, and carrying all Laws Divine and Humane in the arbitrary Rols and Records of their own breasts, like so many Roman Pontifs, making their own wils and lusts their onely law; to Gods dishonour, Religions slander, all good mens grief, the ill example of future ages, and hastning of Gods judgments on us to our Scourge or Ruine.

Farewell.

c. 25. 27.
and the false Jew, or Ramsy his Examination at Newcastle, printed 1653.

Acts 20.
30.

1 Tim. 3.
[...]. to 7.

Pro [...].
23. 23.

Luke 5. 39.

Tertullian
de Praescript.
adv.
Haereticos.

2 Tim. 3. 1,
&c

2 Thes. 2.
3, 4.

Jam. 4. 13.
15.

A Brief Polemicall

[Page 1]

Dissertation concerning THE TRUE TIME of the INCHOATION AND DETERMINATION of the LORDS-DAY.

IT hath been a great Question of late times among private Christians, and Divines, when the Lords-Day (being no artificiall, but a naturall day consisting of 24 hours, as they generally acknowledge) should begin and end? Whether at Evening, Morning, or Midnight? Certainly, if I may freely vent my thoughts without offence, I conceive (under correction of graver judgements) that in divine & true account, it begins & ends at Evening, immediately after Sun-set, when the Twilight ends, and the Evening Starre begins to shine: A truth so manifest, in my poor apprehension, that it is uncap [...]ble of any dispute.

For the clearer resolution whereof, I shall in the first place admir, that men in civil respects may begin and conclude their dayes at severall houres, according to the received computation of their Countr [...]: Some nations commencing and closing up the day at Morning; others, at Noon; oothers, at Midnight, others at Evening. And the Canonists likewise beginning and concluding the day at midnight in regard of Contracts; at morning, in respect of judgements passed; in at Evening regard of sanctification and religious observation. But yet in all divine relations, men are not left at liberty to setwhat bounds or limits they please to dayes appropriated to Gods more speciall worship, but they must observe those meets, which God himself (the Sovereign Lord of days and times) hath prefixed to them, beginning, ending their sanctication of them (being a part of his own worship and service) at such time as he hath appointed, which is none other than the Evening, the boundary he first set to dayes, both for naturall and sacred uses.

To put this out of further Controversie, I shall first of all propound such reasons and authorities as irrefragably evidence; That the Lords day ought to begin and cease at Evening: then answer such Objections and Replies, as are, or may be opposed against it. And here for the more perspicuous manifestation of the truth, before I proceed to any punct [...]all probation of the point in question, I shall premise and make good these five couclussions, which will soon over-rule and resolve it.

Gen. 2. 2,
3. Exod.
20. 7, 8, 9
10. Levit.
23. 32.
Neb. 13.
19. Luke
23, 54, 5
[...] c. 29.
1.

Neh. 4. 21.
Anselmus
de Imagine mundi ▪ I.
2. c 4
Alcuinus
de Eccles.
Officiis c.
43. Col.
1128.

*Po [...]*idor Virgil. de Inventor.
rerum I. 2.
cap. 5.

Pupilla
oculi pars
9. c. 6.
Summa Angelica.
Tit. Dies
Hostiensis Summa I.
2. Tit de Feriis f.
149. Lind- wood Provinc.
Constit. I.
2. Tit. de Feriis f.
74.

First, That all dayes in Scripture and divine calculation, begin and end at Evening.

Psal. 74.
16. Don. 2.

Secondly, That the seventh day Sabbath in Scripture account, did alwayes commence and determine at Evening; and that the Jews did ever solemnize it from Evening to Evening.

20, 21.
Acts 1. 7.
Conclusion.

Thirdly, That the very first day of the week whereon our Saviour rose again, began and ended at Evening, in divine computation, or Scripture account.

Fourthly, That this beginning and concluding of dayes at Evening, is perpetuall and immutable.

Fifthly, That Christs Resurrection in the morning, did no wayes alter the beginning or end of dayes, nor yet translate the beginning of that first day whereon he arose from Evening to Morning; nor change the former limits thereof.

For the first of these, That all dayes in Scripture and divine calculation begin and end at Evening; it is most apparant.

First, by Genesis, 1. 5, 9, 19, 23, 31. where the Scripture is expresse in point; that at the very Creation of the world and beginning of time and dayes, the Evening and the Morning [Page 3]

Conclusion.
1

made the first, second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, (and by consequence the seventh) first dayes that ever were; the onely patterns for the inchoation and determination of all dayes since: the Evening, being here placed before the Morning (as Expositors observe) by God himself, because the day in naturall and divine account begins at Evening, the Evening and darknesse being preceding to the morning and light, even in point of time, Gen. 1, 2, 3.

Proof 1.

*In Genesi no [...] nō praecedentis dici est, seasub-sequentis, id est principtum futur [...] non finis praeteriti.
Hierom. in Jonam c.
2. Tom. 5.
p 137. G.
Proof 2.*

Secondly, it is evident by Exod. 12. 3, 6, 12, 29, 42, 51. compared and paralelled with Levit. 23. 5. Numb. 9. 11. cap. 28. 16. Deut. 16. 4. Josh. 5. 10. 2 Chron. 30. 15. c. 35. 1. Ezra 6. 19. 20. and Ezech. 45. 21. (all treating of the time when the Passeover was to begin) In the tenth day of this Moneth, they shall take to them every man a Lamb, a Lamb for an house, and ye shall keep it up, untill the fourteenth day of the same Moneth, and the whole Assembly of the Congregation of Israel shall kill it in the Evening: For I will passe through the Land of Egypt this night, and will smite all the first born of the Land of Egypt both of man and beast. In the fourteenth day of the first moneth at Even, is the Lords Passeover; the fourteenth day at Even shall they keep it. And the children of Israel went away, and did as the Lord had commanded And it came to passe that at midnight the Lord smote all the first born in the Land of Egypt, &c. It is a night to be much observed unto the Lord, for bringing the chilaren of Israel out of the Land of Egypt, And it came to passe the self same day that thé Lord did bring the children of Israel out of the Land of Egypt by their Armies.

From which words it is apparant;

1. That the fourteenth day of the Month Abib, on which the Passeover was kept, began in Scripture account, at Evening:

1. Because they were to keep the Paschal Lamb, untill the fourteenth day, and then to kill it in the Evening; therefore that day began at Evening.

2. Because the feast of the Passeover, with the killing, dressing and eating of the Paschall Lamb did commence at Evening; theretore the day too, which no doubt the Feast began: for if the day began not till the following morning, the Passeover had been kept before it, not upon it, upon the thirteenth [Page 4] not the fourteenth day of the month.

2. That that Evening and night on which the Passeover was kept, was part of the following, not of the foregoing day.

1. Because this Feast of the Passeover was to be kept the whole fourteenth day, in remembrance of Gods passing over the Israelites, slaying the Egyptians, and delivering his people out of Egypt: Since therefore they began not to kill and eat the Passeover in the morning, but at Evening, the Evening must necessarily begin the day, and be a part onely of the following day, not of the day preceding it; else it would have been but an half-holy day, and no more, the whole preceding day being not solemnized, but the night alone; or at least, a holy day made up of the Evening of the fourteenth, and the morning of the fifteenth day, not of the fourteenth day alone; both which are directly contrary to the Text.

2. Because this celebrating of the Passeover the fourteenth day at Evening, was done in memory of Gods passing over them, and slaying the Egyptians at midnight following; and bringing them out of Egypt with their Armies the next morning: this Evening therefore must be part of that day to which Midnight and the Morning following did belong, which must necessarily appertain to the fifteenth, not the fourteenth day, if the fourteenth day began the midnight or morning before, and not that very evening; and so the fourteenth day should be solemnized for a deliverance happening on the fifteenth day, not on it; which were absurd to think. The deliverance therefore happening the midnight and morning which succeeded this Evening, it must doubtlesse be solemnized as part of the subsequent, not of the precedent day.

3. Because the Text saith expresly, Exod. 12. 51. The same day the Lord brought the children of Israel out of Egypt by their Armies: therefore this Evening and Midnight were part of the ensuing day, because the Israelites departed not out of Egypt with their Armies till the morning following, as that Chapter manifests: and yet the Scripture saith; that they departed out of Egypt the same fourteenth day, whereon they did eat the Passeover, and God slew the first-born of Egypt. This fourteenth day therefore in divine calculation, both as a naturall day, and as a Passeover day too, began and ended at Evening; and so by consequence all other dayes.

See Exod.

13. 3, 4, 5.

Thirdly, it is most clear by Exod. 12. 18, 19. compared with Levit. 23. 5, 6. and Numb. 28. 16. In the first moneth on the fourteenth day of the moneth at Proof 3.
EVEN: Seven dayes shall there be no leaven found in your houses: seven dayes shall unleavened bread be eaten. This Feast of unleavened bread was to continue seven dayes: but these dayes and this Feast by Gods own limitation did begin and end at Evening: for the Text is expresse, that on the fourteenth day at EVEN they should eat unleavened bread till the twenty first day at EVEN: The Evening therefore was both the Alpha and Omega of this Feast, of all these dayes in Scripture reckoning, and so by consequence of all other dayes.

Fourthly, this is as clear as the Sun at Noon-day, by the Ceremoniall Laws concerning uncleannesse. On any dayes or seasons of the year, if any of the Israelites chanced to be legally unclean, in some cases they were to remain unclean for one day: in others, for seven dayes. But how did these dayes begin and end, in Gods account? Certainly at Evening: For all the Texts run thus concerning him who was unclean for one day; He shall be unclean untill the Even: and when the Evening cometh on, he shall wash himself with water, and when the Sun is down, he shall come into the Camp again. And thus concerning the other: On the seventh day he shall purifie himself, and shall be clean at Even, witnesse Deut. 23. 11. Num. 19. 7, 8, 11, 12, 16, 19, 21, 22. Levit. 11. 24. to 40. c. 15. 5. to 27. c. 17. 15. c. 22. 6. All dayes therefore in divine computation, began and concluded at Even, since all the dayes of mens ceremoniall uncleannesse did so; which uncleannesse might befall them upon any day whatsoever.

Fifthly, it is i [...] perspicuous by the Israelites solemne Easting-dayes, which commenced and ended at Even, For they usually fasted untill Even, Judges 20. 23. 26. [Page 6]
2 Sam. 1. 12. Their dayes therefore b [...]ing but the limits of their Fasts (for they fasted sometimes one day, sometimes two dayes, sometimes three, or more) did question lesse begin and determine at Even: in their own and Scripture computation.

Sixthly it is apparent, by Deul. 21. 22, 23. If a man be p [...] to death, and thou hang him on a tree, his body shall not remain all night upon the tree; but thou shalt in any wise bury him that day: compared with Joshua 8. 29. and cap. 10 26. 27. And the King of Ai he hanged on a tree untill eventide: and assoon as the Sunne was down, Joshua commanded that they shouldtake his careasse down from the tree, &c. And he smote the five Kings, and hanged them on five trees, and they were hanging upon the trees untill the Evening, and at the time of the going down of the Sun, Joshua commanded, and they took them down off the trees, and cast them into the Cave wherein they had been hid, &c. compared with Joh. 19. 31, 38. Mat. 27. 57. 58. Mar. 15, 42, 43. The Je [...]s therefore because it was the preparation, that the bodies should n [...]

Proof 5.

See 1
Sam. 7. 6.
c. 31. 13. 1
Ch [...]Jon.
 10 12.
Neh. 1. 4.
Esth. 4.
 16. Jer. 36.
 6. Dan. 6.
 18. Proof.

remain upon the Crosse the Sabbath day (for that Sabbath day was an high day) besought Pilate, that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away. And when the Even was come (that is the Evening of the Day about Sunne-setting, or Evening tide;) Joseph of Arimathea went to Pilate and begged the body of Jesus; then Pilate commanded the body to be given him. And he took it down and wrapped it in linnen, and laid it in his own tomb. Which Texts (parallell'd with Ephes. 4. 26. Let not the Sun go down upon your wrath;) do fully evidence, that the day in divine resolution begins and ends at Even; because the bodies of Malefactors, which were to b [...] buried the same day, and might not remain on the tree all night, were then taken down and interred.

See Josh
8. 29.

Seventhly, That speech of David to Jonathan; 1 Sam. 20. 5. Let me go that I may hide my self in the fields unto the third day at Evening: annexed to that of 1 Sam. 30. 17. And David smote them from the twilight, even to the Evening of the next day; is a direct proof, that the Scripture begins the day at Even, making it part of the subs [...]quent, not of the precedent day, as [Page 7] these phrases, unto the third day at evening, and to the evening of the next day, import.

Proof 3.

Eighthly and lastly, It is clear by the joynt confession of all sorts of Authors, of all Commentators on the forequoted and the ensuing Texts, that the Penmen of the Scriptures (who were guided by the Holy Ghost, with the whole Jewish Church, Nation, directed by the same Spirit, and the Scripture computation) did ever begin and end their daies at evening, not at morning, or midnight, as the Jews yet doe. A truth so evident that our Opposites in this point of the Lordsday's inchoation, for the most part grant it, without any contradiction; having nought else to plead for themselves but this, that Christs resurrection in the morning did translate the beginning of days, from evening to the morning. Therefore it is undoubtedly true, that all daves in scripture and divine resolution, begin and end at Evening: So that this first Conclusion is uncontrollable.

Proof. 8

Anastatius Sinaica.
Quast. lib.
quaest.
152.

For he second, That the seventh day Sabbath, in Scripture account, did ever begin and end at Evening; and that the Jews did constantly solemnize it from Evening to evening: it is most apparent.

Conclusion.
2

For first, All dayes in Scripture and Jewish computation commenced and concluded at Evening, as the former Conclusion manifests; therefore the seventh day Sabbath too.

Proof. 1

Secondly, the Scripture peremptorily commands this beginning and close of the Sabbath. Levit. 23. 32. From EVEN to EVEN, ye shal celebrate your Sabbath: which though it be specially meant of the Sabbath of Attonement, yet it is true of the seventh day

Proof. 2

sabbath too, it being the original pattern, by which the Sabbath of attonement was squared, and thus bounded out.

Thirdly, It is apparent by Nehem. 13. 19. And it came to passe, that when the gates of Jerusalem began to be dark, before the sabbath (that is, when the twilight began) I commanded that the Gates should be shut, Proof. 3 and charged that they should not be open till after the Sabbath: and some of my servants set I at the gates, that there should no burden be brought in on the sabbath day. By which it is evident that the seventh [Page 8]

day sabbath began at Evening, not at morning, or midnight. For why should Nebemiah command the gates of Jerusalem to be shut just as it began to be dark, a little before the Evening star began to appear (when the Evening & Sabbath actually begin) but to prevent Carriers and others who brought burdens into Jerusalem, from prophaning the Sabbath, which would have begun before they could have passed to their Innes, and unladed their burdens, had they admitted them to have entred the gates so late; the Sabbath being to begin almost presently after when the day light ceased, and the starres began to appear: which had it not commenced till midnight or morning following, he would not have closed up the gates so early, since they might have unladed their Carriages a good space before the Sabbath, though they had not entred Jerusalem till the twilight ended. His timely shutting up of the gates therfore to prevent this breach of the Sabbath by unlading burdens, is a pregnant evidence, that it began at Even, soon after, or just when the gates were barred. See Neh. 4. 21

Fourthly, it is clear by Luke 23. 54, 55, 56. compared with Luke 24. 1, 2. Mark 16. 1, 2. c. 15. 42, 43. John 19. 31, 38. cap. 20. 1. &c. Matth. 27. 57. 58. By all which it appears, that our Saviours body was taken down from the Crosse and laid in the Sepulchre upon our Friday at Evening a little before night, and that they took it down, and buried it then, that it might not remain on the Crosse upon the Sabbath day: to which Saint Luke addes this as a Corollary; And that day was the Preparation, and the Sabbath drew on, and the women also which came with him from Galilee followed after, and beheld the Sepulchre, and how his body was laid: & they returned, and prepared Spices and ointments, and rested the Sabbath day according to the Commandement. And when the Sabbath was past (writes S^t Mark) Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James and Salome had bought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint him: And very early in the morning, the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre, at the rising of the Sunne, as it began to down (saith Saint Matthew) whiles it was yet dark, [Page 9] Mat: [...]. 1.

(writes Saint John) and they found the stone rolled away from the Sepulchre: By all which it appears, That the Sabbath begun and concluded at Evening. See Neh. 13. 21. which makes it manifest. Proof 4.

which came with him from Galilee followed after, and beheld the Sepulchre, and how his body was laid: & they returned, and prepared Spices and ointments, and rested the Sabbath day according to the Commandement. And when the Sabbath was past (writes S^t Mark) Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James and Salome had bought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint him: And very early in the morning, the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulchre, at the rising of the Sunne, as it began to down (saith Saint Matthew) whiles it was yet dark, [Page 9] Mat: [...]. 1.

(writes Saint John) and they found the stone rolled away from the Sepulchre: By all which it appears, That the Sabbath begun and concluded at Evening. See Neh. 13. 21. which makes it manifest. Proof 4.

(writes Saint John) and they found the stone rolled away from the Sepulchre: By all which it appears, That the Sabbath begun and concluded at Evening. See Neh. 13. 21. which makes it manifest. Proof 4.

(writes Saint John) and they found the stone rolled away from the Sepulchre: By all which it appears, That the Sabbath begun and concluded at Evening. See Neh. 13. 21. which makes it manifest. Proof 4.

For first, Saint Luke saith, the Sabbath drew on; when Christ was taken down from the Crosse about the Evening, implying that it was then almost ready to begin.

John 20.
1.

Secondly, they took him down them, because he should not hang upon the Crosse any part of the Sabbath.

Thirdly, the women shortly after their return from his buriall began their Sabbath dayes rest.

Fourthly, The Sabbath was past, the first day begun, and our Saviour risen, before the women came to his Sepulchre: yet they came thither at day-dawning; whiles it was dark: and their apparelling themselves, their buying of spices, and coming from their houses or lodgings to the Sepulchre (all after the Sabbath was fully ended) would take them up some hours time perchance, or more. It is apparent therefore by all these particulars, that the Sabbath even in the Evangelists account, both at and after our Saviours Passion and Resurrection, commenced and ended at Evening: So that Saint Matthews; In the end of the Sabbath, as it began to dawn towards the first day of the week: (which some object to the contrary, as if the Sabbath then ended not till the morning) must be interpreted by Saint Marks; after the Sabbath was ended; and the other Evangelists, On the first day of the week (that being the true sence and scope of his words;) else Christ, in his account did rise again upon the seventh-day Sabbath, not on the first day of the week: and so by consequence, upon the second, not the third day after his Passion; which is directly contrary to all the other Evangelists, and Scriptures, to the Article of our Creed, and to Christs own predictions of his rising again the third day, recorded thrice by Saint Matthew himself, Mat. 12. 40. c. 16. 21. c. 27. 63, 64. which he would never contradict in the history of his resurrection.

Mat. 28. 1.

Mark 16. 1.

Luke 24. 1.

John 20.

1. Mark 16.

2. 9.

Fifthly it is certain by the constant practise of the Jewish Church, who both before and since Christs time (even to this present day) did ever begin and end their Sabbath at Evening. Witnesse [Page 10]

Proof 5.

Josephus that famous Jewish Historian, Contra Apionem I 1. c 833. Hierom comment. in Jonam, c. 2. Tom. 5. p. 137. Eusebius de Praeparat. Evangel I. 8. c. 2. Tom. 1. p. 141. S. Augustine de Tempore Serm. 251. Chrysostome, Homil. 4. in Genes. Tom. 1. Col. 26. B. Hom. 62. in Matth. Tom. 2. Col. 559. B. Anastatius Sinaita, Anagogicarum Contemplationum. He [...] Jam. I 2 & Questio, 152. 153. Eibl. Patrum. Tom. 6. pars, 1. p. 634. E. 794, 795. Hospinian de O [...]igine Festorum, fol. 31. 72. b. 68, 69. 161, 162. Marlorat in Matth. 28. v. 1. Joseph Scaliger, de Emendatione temporis, I. 92. & 6. p 119. 532, 533. God win his Jewish Antiquities, [...] 3. c. 3. p. 131. Ainsworth, his Annotations on Genesis 1. v. 5. Levit. 22 32. together with most ancient and modern Commentators upon Gen. 1. 5. 9. 13. Levit. 23. 32. Exod. 12. 18. Matth. 12. 40. c. 16. 21. c. 28. 1. Mark 16. 1, 2, 9. Luke 23 54, 55, 56. c. 24. 1. John 20. 1. Acts 10. 40. 1 Cor. 15. 5. with those Authours quoted in my Histriomatrix. p. 643, 644. and others in the margent: who all subscribe with one consent, that the seventh day Sabbath, (and all other dayes else) in the Scripture and Jewish account, did ever begin and determine at Evening;

This second Conclusion therefore, is past all question.

For the third; That the same first day of the week, on which our Saviour rose again, began at Evening in divine computation: it is most certain.

1. Because all dayes in Scripture account did then begin, as the Premises evidence: Therefore this day too.

Secondly, because that seventh day Sabbath, on which our Saviour rested in his grave, began and end [...]d at Evening: as is clear by Matthew 28. 1. compared with Levit. 23 32. and other fore quoted Scriptures: by the joynt attestation of all divines and Expositors on these Scriptures: and by the second Conclusion: Therefore it must necessarily begin at Evening, when this Sabbath ended: else the Evening may and night between the end of the Sabbath, and our S [...]viours resurrection should be part of no day at all (like that of Job, Job 3. 3, 6. being no parcell of the Sabbath, nor yet of that first day of the week on which Christ arose) which can-not be.

Thirdly, All the Evangelists with one consent, record, that our Saviour rose again upon the first day of the week, very early in the morning, whiles it was dark, before the women came to his sepulchre, and after the Sabbath was past. Mark 16. 1, 2, 9. Matth. 28. 1, 2. Luke 23 56 c. 24. 1, 2. John 20. 1, 2. the chief reason alledged by all (especia [...]ly by our opposites in this Controversie) why Christians solemnize this day as their Sabbath. If then he arose upon the first day, the day was certainly begun some space before his resurrection; else he must rise with it, or before it, not upon it. Neither did or could this day-begin at Morning, day-dawning, or Sun-rising in divine compute, because our Savior was risen, and the women were come to the grave before that time, as these [Page 11] Texts affirm; and yet then the Sabbath was past, and this first day begun; which could not be if the day commenced not before the morning; (begining but at break of day, or Sun-rising:) n [...]ither did it begin at midnight, because the Scripture, Jews, and Ecclesiasticall Writers know no such naturall or divine incep [...]tion of the day; therefore questionlesse it began

S [...]Je Chemnisius Examen Concil [...]i Tridentini, pars 4. De Festis p.
150 Wolphius
Chronol I
2. c. 1. Dr.
Bound of the Sabbath.
Edit. 2.
1606. p.
103, 104.
Dr. Boyes his Postils on the Decalogue,
p. 51.
Purchas Pilgrimage
I. 2 c. 4 p.
121. Amesius Medulla Theologicae,
I. 3. c. 15.
sect. 36.
Mr.
Wemes, in his exposition of the Lawes of Moses
I. 1. p. 226.
to 207.
when the day beginneth.
Conclusion
3.

Proof. 1.

Proof. 2.

Proof 3.

Mark 16. 1, 2, 9.

at Evening; as the generality of Expositors on these Texts acknowledge, it being the true time of the dayes Inchoation in divine accompt.

Fourthly, Mat. 12. 4 c. 16. 21. c. 27. 63. Mark 8. 31. c. 14 58. Luke 13. 32. Hosea 6. 2. Acts 10. 40. 1 Cor. 15.

4. and all our Creeds assure us, that our Saviour Prnof 4.

rose again the third day from his Passion:

which he predicting to his Disciples, useth this expression, Matth 27. 63. and Mark 8. 31. After three dayes (that is, after the beginning of three dayes, or of the third day from my Passion, not after three dayes ended, for then he had risen again upon the fourth day, not the third) I will rise again: which Phrase (being all one in sense with, upon the third day I will rise again, as appears by Matth. 16. 21.) implies that a good part of the third d [...]y on which he arose, should be past before his rising, which could not be, had the day b [...]gun just at morning or midnight, not at Evening; he being risen very early, whiles it was dark, John 20. 1, 2. The question [Page 12]

then for the clearing of this Article of Christs resurrection upon the third day, will be onely this; What is meant here by three dayes? How these dayes are and ought to be computed? and from what time they did begin? To which all ancient & modern divines, who have commented on the Evangelists, or written of Christs resurrection, reply with one accord.

1. That by three dayes in these Scriptures is meant, not three intire dayes, (for Christ lay not three whole dayes in his grave) but one whole day and a part of two other dayes,) but part to wit part of the sixth day whereon he was crucified; the whole Sabbath day following it, and the Evening or night which was part of the first day whereon he arose.

2. That these dayes must be thus computed, and did thus begin and end. The first of th [...]m being our good Friday) began at Evening and ended at Evening, shortly after our Saviour was taken down from his Crosse and intombed.

The second of them (being the 7th day Sabbath) began and ended at Evening; all which day Christ rested, and kept a Sabbath in his grave. The third day (the Jews first day, & our Lords-day) began at Even, when the Sabbath concluded, and ended the Evening following, a little after our Saviours appearance to his Disciples, John 20. 19. By which calculation, our Saviour lay part of the first, the whole second, and a good part of the third day in his grave, (to wit, the Evening and greatest part of the night) and so well nigh half the third day, was past before his Resurrection; so that he might well be said to rise again the the third day; and by a Synechdoche Membri, to lie three dayes in his grave, and after three dayes, (that is, after the beginning of three dayes, the latter part of the

See
Ignatius, Martyr Epist. 5.
ad Trallianos. Bibl.
Patr. Tom.
1. p 79. b.
Theophilus Antiochenus Comment.
I. 2. in Evangelia.
Ib. Tom. 2.
p. 152. C.
Hierome, Ambrose, Chrysostome, Beda, Anselmus, Theophi-lact, Christianus Grammaticus, Paschati-us, Rabbertus; in their Commentaries, on these Texts, and on Mat. 28
1. Mark 16.
1, 2 9.

third day being included, and the forepart onely excluded in this Phrase of speech) to rise again: which he could not be properly said to do, had this third day, begun at morning, he being risen again when it was dark John 20. 1. Matth. 28. 1, 2. and so upon the second day; before not on or after the third day, in this strange accompt, which no Divine in this particular of Christs resurrection ever followed; all of them joyntly resolving, that the third day on which our Saviour arose, and the two preceding dayes, according to divine computation, began and ended at Evening. Wherefore this third Conclusion, even by the unanimous consent of all men, is indubitable, and quite overturns our Antagonists foundation for the Lords dayes inc [...]ption in the morning, to wit, that Christs Resurrection in the morning, did translate the beginning of this first day, from Evening to morning; which is but a grosse mistake, directly contrary to all the recited Scriptures, the resolution of all judicious Divines, and writers in all ages, as I shall anon more fully manifest in its proper place.

For the fourth, That this beginning and concluding of dayes at Evening is immutable (I mean in divine respects, not of civill;) it is most clear for these ensuing reasons.

First, Because it is that bound which God himself (the Lord of times, and Ancient of dayes) hath prescribed them, both by his word, his works, and own divine calculation, as the three foregoing Conclusions evidence: and what God himself hath thus limited and prefixed, cannot be altered but by himself alone (who never changed this beginning or period of dayes for ought appears in Scripture) Eccles 3. 14. Jer. 31. 35, 36. c. 33. 20, 21.

Secondly, because it is that termination of days w^{ch} God himself instituted at the very Creation, whenas he prefixed such limits to days & times, as were to continue in all succeeding ages, till time should be no more, witness Gen. 1. 2, 3, 5, 8, 13, to 20. 23. 31. where God made darknesse to precede the light, the Evening antecedent to the Morning, and to begin the day; the Evening and the Morning, (not the Morning, and the Evening, I mean in point of priority) making the first seven days, and so by consequence all succeeding dayes; the dayes and weeks being now the same, and of the same dimension, as they were at the Creation; and therefore retain the self same beginning and end now, as God designed to them then; and that by a natura; unchangeable Ordinance. For God at

Luke 24. 1.
Calvin, Luther, Musculus, Bullinger, Melancthon, Bucer, Marlorate, Junius, Zanchius, Beza, Lyra, Rabanus, Maurus, Hugo Cardinalis, Carthusian, Tostatu [...], Iansenius, Cornelius a lapide, and others on this Text, Gregory Nyssen, Oratio 1. &
2. de Resurrectione Christi, Cassianus
de Incarnat.
Domini. 1.
5 Bibl.
Patr. Tom.
5. pars 2.
p 8. f. 6.
Hierome Comment.
in Jonam,
c. 2. Tom,
5. p. 137.
b.
Augustine,
quaest.
super Evangelia,
quaest. 6.
7.
Anastatius Siniata.
Quaestionum
I. qu. 152, 153. Bibl.
Patr. Tom.
6. pars 1.
p. 794,

the Creation ordained the Sunne, the Moon, and Starres, to rule over the day and night; to divide the light from the darknes, (that is, to bound out the day and night) to be for signs and for seasons, and for dayes and years: Gen. 1. 14. to 19. Psal. 136. 6, 7, 8. Psal. 104. 19. And that so long as the world should endure, or the Sun and Moon have a being. witnesse Gen. 8. 22 While the earth remaineth, seed time, and ha [...]vest, and cold and heat, and Summer and Winter, and day and night shall not cease: that is, they shall observe the bounds and times that I have pr [...]scribed them at the Creation, without any alteration. Jer. 31, 35, 36. and c. 33. 20. 21. makes this m [...]st clear. Thus saith the Lord, which giveth the Sun for a light by day, and the Ordinances of the Moon and of the Starres, for a light by [Page 13] 795.

Together with Saint Cyprian de Symbole, Dr. lack son, Mr, Byfield, and all Expositors
on the Creed, who joyntly accord in this truth.

night: if these Ordinances depart from before me, or if you can break my Covenant of the day and of the night, that there shall not be day and night in their season (that is, at the time which I appointed at the Creation) Then also might my Covenant be broken with David my servant. Which Texts do fully evince the beginning, end of dayes, and limits of time instituted at the Creation, to be unalterable so long as the world remains: which is likewise backed by Psal. 74. 16, 17. Ps. 72. 57. Ps. 104. 19. Ps. 121. 6. Ps. 136. 9, and 148 3, 5, 6. The day is thine, the night also is thine, thou hast prepared the light and the Sunne, thou hast made Summer and Winter. He appointeth the Moon for seasons, the [Page 14]

Mark 8. 31.
Mat. 27.
63.

Conclusion
4.

Dan. 2. 2.
c. 21. c 7 9
13 Ps. 74
16. Acts 1.
7.

Proof 1.

Sunknoweth his going down: Thou makest darknesse, and it is night. Praise him Sun and Moon, praise him all ye starres of light, for he commanded and they were created, he hath also established them for ever and ever, he hath made a Decree which shall not passe. From all which Scriptures it is infallible, that God at the Creation fixed immutable limits to dayes and times, both for their beginning, end, length, which shall and must continue the same for ever; (the dayes, weeks moneths and years, being of the same extent for the present, as they were at the beginning) Therefore the inception and ending of the day at Evening, being settled at the Creation, doth and must remain unalterable.

Proof 2.

Thirdly, This inchoa [...]ion and conclusion of the day at Evening, is ratified by the fourth Commandement, a morall and perpetuall precept, founded on the very course and L [...]w of nature at the Creation, as most assert, Gen. 2. 1, 2. 3. For this Commandement enjoyning men, To keep holy the Sabbath day, to do no manner of work upon it, and to labour six dayes, and do all their wor [...]: For in six dayes the Lord made heaven and earth, the Sea and all that in them is and rested

[Page 15]

Proof 3.

Exod. 20.
[...]. to 12.

the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed he Sabbath day, and hallowed it: doth her [...] in apparently confirm for ever, the beginning, [...]nd, and limits bo [...]h of dayes and weeks, as they were [...]ttled at the Creation. For this precept having a retrospect to Gods six dayes work, and his seventh dayes rest, when he created the world; and enjoyning men to work six dayes, to rest the seventh day, and keep it holy, as God did then; doth apparantly intimate, that these foresaid seven dayes, were as so many royall Standards of time, by which all subsequent dayes and weeks must be measured: which must begin, end, and have the same dimen [...]ions, with that originall week, and those first seven dayes. Wherefore since they began and ended at Evening then, as I have proved: all other dayes likewise must do so, by vertue of this command. The rather, because it prescribes men, to finish all their work in six dayes, and then to begin their rest, when their work ends, as God did his: but their six dayes work usually ends at Evening; therefore their six days also should then d [...]termine, and their Sabbath or seven dayes r [...]st begin; and so by consequence all the six dayes, the Sabbath day, and so all dayes (for ever) should commence and end at Evening, so long as this commandement is in being, or dayes and weeks shall last.

Psal. 104.
22, 23.
Neh. 21. 4.
cap. 13.
19.

Fourthly, The beginning of dayes must needs be immutable, because the alteration of it from Evening to morning, or midnight (which thwarts the Scripture computation) would falsisie, corrupt many Passages and Texts of Scripture; call into question the truh of our Saviours Resurrection on the third day; and somewhat alter the Scripture Chronology, which is most exact and punctuall; neither of which are sufferable by God or Christians.

Proof 4.

Lastly, this beginning and close of dayes, hath an influence into Gods worship: who as he hath prescribed men, how; so likewise, when to worship him: to wit, especially on the Sabbath, which he hath appropriated to himself; stiling it, his own Sabbath, and holy day, Exod. 16. 23, 25. Levit. 23. 3. Deut. 5. 14. Neh. c. 14. Isa. 58. 13. Exod. 20. 10, c. 31, 16. The sanctification therefore of the Sabbath being a part of Gods worship, and the Sabbath his own peculiar day; which most hold, Christ and his apostles, and the Primitive Christians by Gods warrant translated to the Lords day) that beginning and limits of it, which God hath fixed, must not be changed but by God; because it would alter both Gods day and worship too. To prevent which inconvenience, God hath given not onely generall commands to sanctifie this day, but likewise a speciall precept to begin and end it at Even, Levit. 23. 32. From Even to Even you shall celebrate your Sabbath: there being no such particular precept given for the limits of other dayes, (which are bounded out in more generall termes) it being both dangerous and absurd, to leave the inception, or bounds of the Sabbath

Proof 5.

See Mr.
Fox, Dr.
Fuller and others on Rev. 1. 10.
M. Sprint
Mr. Bownd,
Mr. Widly, Mr.
Bernard,
Dr. Twisse,
Mr. Cawdry
and others

arbitrary unto men, to begin and end it when they of the please; the day being Gods not theirs; the Sabbath. sanctification thereof, a speciall part of his service, which men have no power to alter or diminish: and whatsoever in God [...] service is not of faith (warranted or prescribed by his word) being sinne and will-worship, Rom. 14. 23. Col. 2. 18. 20, 21, 22, 23. From all which I may safely affirm; that this beginning and ending of dayes at Even (especially of the Sabbath day) is immutable, and so my fourth Conclusion undeniable.

For the fifth; That Christs Resurrection in the morning did no wayes alter the beginning or end of dayes, nor yet translate the inception of that day whereon he arose, From Evening to morning; it is Conclusion 5. unquestionable.

First, Because this commencement and conclusion of dayes at Evening, is immutable; as I have manifested in in the fourth Conclusion, therefore not [Page 17] Proof 1. altered by Christ [...] Resurrection.

Secondly, because Christs Passion and Resurrection abolished or changed nothing, but that which was typicall and ceremoniall: witnesse Gal. 4. 9, 10, 11. Col. 2. 14. to 22. Acts 15. 24, 28, 29. Heb. 9. 10, 11. c. 10. 1. 2, 9. with the unanimous suffrage of all Divine [...]. But the beginning and end of dayes at Even; was no wayes typicall or ceremoniall, but rather naturall and morall, being instituted at the Creation, ratified by the fourth Commandement, and immutably fixed for ever, as the premise [...] testifie. Therefore it was not abolished, or translated by Christs Resurrection or Passion from Evening to morning. Proof 2.

Thirdly, Christ abrogated or changed nothing, but what was necessary to be abolished or altered upon warrantable reasons and substantiall grounds: See Heb. 8. 6, 7, 8. c. 9. 9. to 16. c. 10. 1. to, 11. Col. 2. 16, 17, 22, 23. Ephes. 2. 15. Gal. 5. 1. to 7. Acts 15. 10, 28. But there was no necessity, reason, cause, or ground at all, of altering this begining and end of dayes at Evening; therefore Christs Resurrection did not alter or abolish it. Proof 3.

Fourthly, the alteration, limitation, of times, dayes, and seasons, is a Peculiar Prerogative of God the Father, reserved in his own power, not in Christs, as is manifest by Acts 1. 7. Matth. 24. 36. Mark 13. 32. Levit. 23. 2. &c. Psal. 118. 23, 24. Exod. 13. 2, 3, 6, 14. Exod. 20. 1, 8, 10, 11. compared with Daniel 2. 20, 21. Psal. 74. 16, 17. Jer. 33. 20. c. 31. 35. Psal. 136 1. 7, 8, 9. upon which Priviledge Royall none anciently durst encroach, but that presumptuous Horn, typifying the Papacy. Dan. 7. 25. Christ therefore by his bare Resurrection made no such alteration of the dayes inchoation, having no speciall Commission from his Father so to do. Proof 4.

Fifthly, there is not one word or sillable in all the Scripture, which either affirms or intimates, that Christs Resurrection made any mutation of the beginning Proof 5.

or end of dayes, neither can any man produce one substantiall reason, grounded on Scripture, why Christs resurrection should cause such a change as this: or why his resurrection should do it, rather than his Nativity, Passion, or Ascension. [Page 18] Therefore I may saf [...]ly conclude, that it made no such change untill the contrary can be proved.

Sixthly, the Scripture is expresse, that Christs Resurr [...]ction did no wayes change either the order, name, or nature of that day whereon he aros [...]. For all the Evangelists speaking of it as Christs Resurrection day in their Histories of the Resurrection (penned some space after it) ever stile it, The first day of the week, Math. 28. 1. Mark 16. 29. Luke 24. 1. John 20. 1. 19. the very name that was given it at the Creation, Gen. 1. 5. which was still retained after our Saviours Resurrection and Ascension: Acts 20. 7. 1 Cor. 16. 2. having no other title at all imposed on it but this in Scripture. (that of Revel. 1. 10. to wit, the title of Lords-day, being applied by some to the seventh day Sabbath; by others, [...]o Easter day onely: yet by most to the Lords-day) for ought that certainly appears. Which name implies, that it continued the same after Christs Resurrection, as before; the First day of the Week, for number, order; beginning the week as afore; and so by consequence commencing at Evening as before; it being the same in name, in order, in nature (though not in use and observation amongst Christians) as it was at the Creation: Therefore the same in its inception too, and so not altered from Evening to morning.

Proof 6.

Psal 12.
[...]. 14.

See Mr. Fo [...], Dr.
Fulk and others on Apoc. 1.
10 D.
Bownd and others of the Sabbath.

Seventhly that very first day on which Christ arose in Scripture and divine account began and ended at Evening (not at morning or midnight) as I have undeniably proved at large in the third Conclusion: Christs Resurrection therefore, did no wayes alter or translate the beginning of it from morning to Evening, as some f [...]sely affirm, but never prove: And if it made no such mu [...]ation of the beginning and end of that same First day on which he arose; much lesse then of any other that succeeded it, or of the other week dayes on which he did not rise again. Christs Resurrection did not actually translate the beginning of that first day on which he arose again from Evening to Morning: For had that day begun at [Page 19] Morning, just at or from the time which he arose ([...] some pretend) then he had not risen again upon the third, but on the second day from his Passion; which directly oppugnes the Scripture, and the Article of our Creed, that he rose again the third day from the dead, not the second. To make this reason evident. The Morning of this first day began not till day breaking, or day-light: and if this first day began then too, Christ certainly did not, could not rise upon it, but before it, and so on the second day: For the women came to the Sepulchre when it was yet dark (before day-light appeared, or the day began in this accompt) and yet Christ was then risen: John 20. 1, 2. therefore before

Proof 7.

Acts 10.
40. 1 Cor.
13. 4.

Saint Luke saith it

the day began in this computation. And if they will begin it from the time that Christ arose, since Christs resurrection was the cause (as they sayd) of this its new inception, or the Terminus à q [...]o, from whence it began; they still sti [...]k fast in the same mir [...]. For if Christs Resurrection changed the commencement of this day, he must be actually risen ere this change could be made, since the cause must necessarily precede the effect; which must begin from and after it, not before, or with it; and if the moment of Christs Resurrection was the Terminus whence this day began (as they affirm;) his Resurrection must needs precede the day, that point of time, from whence the day begins being exclusive, as precedent to it, not inclusive, as any part or parcell of it: and so Christ must necessarily rise, before this first day (to wit, upon the Sabbath or second day) not upon or after it began; and so, not upon the third, or first day of the week, as the Scripture affirms: and by consequence not upon that Lords-day which they solemnize, from morning to morning, in memory of his Resurrection on it; which by their own reasoning [...]nd computation was before it, not upon it. All whi [...]h considered, I may undoubtedly conclude, that Christs Resurrection did no way [...]s alter the beginning or end of dayes, (no not of that first day on which he arose) from morning to Evening: So that this last Conclusion is infa [...]lib [...].

was in the very pro-fundity or beginning of the morning, Luke 24 .
1.

Mat. 27 63.
Mark [...].
31.

These five Conclusions being thus premised, and I [Page 20] hope undeniably proved; I shall now deduce five unanswerable Arguments from them to prove, that the Lords-day, doth and ought of right to begin and end at Evening; not at morning or midnight.

Arguments to prove that the Lords day begins at Evening.

1. If all dayes in Scripture and divine account do alwayes begin and end at Evening (not at morning or midnight) then the Lords-day (being the first day of the week, and included in the universality of dayes) must do so too: But all dayes in Scripture and divine computation, do alwayes begin and end at Evening, (not morning or midnight) as the first Conclusion mani [...]ests. Therefore the Lords-day doth so too.

Argument
1.

2. If the seventh day Sabbath in Scripture account did alway commence and determine at Evening, and the Jews did ever solemnise it from Evening to Evening; then the Lords-day (which succeeds it, and begins when the Sabbath ends) must then begin and conclude; seeing all the week-dayes are of the self-same length, and must have the same inception and Conclusion: & since this Sabbath was thus solemnized long after our Saviours Resurrection by the Apostles, Jews, and Christians too. Matth. 24. . 20. Acts 13, 14, 27. 42. c. 14. 1. c. 15. 20, 21 c. 17. 1, 2, 10. c. 18. 4. But the seventh day Sabbath in Scripture calculation did alwayes commence and determine at Evening, and the Jews did ever solemnize it from Evening to Evening; as the second 2.

Argument

See Mr.
George

Conclusion testifies: Therefore the Lords day must then begin and conclude.

*Widly his Doctrine of the Sabbath.
and others
forecited.*

3. If that very first day of the week whereon our Saviour rose again, began and ended at Evening in divine accompt, even as it was his Resurrection day: then the Lords day (kept in memory of his Resurrection on that day) being the self same day of the week, and having the self same limits as that day had; must then begin and end likewise.

*Argument
3.*

But that very first day of the week, whereon our Saviour rose again began and ended at Evening in divine compute, even as it was his Resurrection day: Therefore the Lords day in respect of its weekly observation and solemnization in memory of our Savlours Resurrection on it, must [Page 21] commence [...]nd detemine at Evening too. The s [...]quel is u [...]deniable; the minor is fully proved in the third Conclusion; so the Argument is unanswerable.

4. This beginning and determination of dayes at Evening be naturall and immutable, therefore the Lords day must have, can have, no other inception or conclusion, but at Evening.

*Argument
4.*

5. I Christs Resurrection in the morning did no ways alter the beginning or end of dayes, nor yet translate the beginning of that day whereon he arose, from Evening to morning; then we ought to make no such alteration; (for that were to be wiser than Christ, yea to usurp Gods speciall Prerogative, to alter times, Dan. 2. 20, 21. c. 7. 25.) & so must keep the Lords-day from Evening to Evening, not from morning to morning, or from midnight to midnight. But Christs Resurrection in the morning, did no wayes alter the beginning and end of dayes; nor yet translate the beginning of that day whereon he arose from Evening to Morning; Therefore the Lords-day ought to be kept from Evening to E [...]vening, not from morning to morning, or midnight to midnight. What can be truly and substantially replied to these five Arguments, I cannot conjecture, they being of sufficient weight to oversway the ballance of this Controversie.

*Argument
5.*

Now to clear this truth more fully; I shall to these five Arguments, accumulate ten reasons more, proving, that the Sabbath, and Lords day, ought to begin at Evening.

First, because this inception of the Sabbath and Lords day, is most suitable to the nature of these dayes. For the Sabbath being nothing else in proper speech, but a day of rest, and being oft times stiled in Scripture a Sabbath of rest, Exod. 16. 23. c. 23. 12. c. 31. 15. c. 34. 21. c. 35. 2, Levi. 16. 31. c. 23. 3. 32. c. 15. c. 25. 21. c. 34. 21. Deut. 5. 14. (both man and beast being enjoyned to rest from their labours on this day;) it is most agreeable to reason, and the equality of the day, that this resting day should begin at Evening, when men naturally and customarily begin their rest, and end their labours: rather than at morning, when they commonly begin their work; or at Midnight, when as they are in the mid [...]est of their rest and sl

Reason 1:

[Page 22]

[...]ep. For when can a day of rest so aptly commence, as when men begin their rest? their resting on it from other labors, being one part of the solemn zation of it? This therefore being the fittest time to begin the day; no doubt, but God (who doth all things wisely and in the aptest season) hath ordered that it should then commence, ([...]s I have manifested in the foregoing Conclusions) it being most proportionable to the nature of the day.

Eccles 3.
1. &c.
Psal. 104.
23, 24.

Secondly, this commencement is most agreeable to Gods own example, and to the fourth Commandement: for God began his seven dayes rest, so soon as ever he ceased from his six dayes works of Creation, Gen. 2. 1, 2. 3. Exod. 20. 9, 10. yea the fourth Commandement prescribing us to labour six dayes, and to do all our work, and to rest the seventh day; implies, that we should b [...]gin our Sabbath dayes rest, when as we finish our six dayes wo [...]k: and that is at Evening, not at morning or midnight. Therefore we should then commence our sanctification of it, and rest upon it.

Reason 2.

For his work that he finished on the seventh day, was onely his Creation, [...]lessing and Sanctification of that day alone: as Pascatius Ra [...] - bertus in Mat. 28. 1. Rabanus, Maurus and others teach.
Reason 3.

Thirdly, this beginning of the Sabbath and Lordsday, is every way best for men, as most consonant to the course of nature, and th [...]ir common practise, for men naturally and customarily (and that by Gods own appointment, and the Scriptures approbation) end their weekday labours at Evening and b [...]gin th [...]ir rest at or night, witnes Ps. 124. 22, 23. The Sun ariseth man goeth forth unto his work, and to his labour untill the Evening, John 9. 4. I must work the works of him that sent me, whiles it is called to day, the night cometh when no man can work, Judg 19. 16. Behold there came an old man from his work out of the field at

Evening, Z [...]ph. 2. 7 In the

See 6 H. S. houses of Askelon they shal lie down in the Ec. 3 7. H. 8 vening, 1 Thess. 5. 7 Those that sleep, sleep in c [...] 3 the night, together with Gen. 19. 1, 2. Exod. 18
Eliz c 4 14. Gen. 2 [...]. 11. Numb 29. 19. Levit. 19. 13. N
Rastabl. [...]b 4. 21 Judg. 19. 4. 11. Eccle [...] 2. 23 Num Labovers, 22: 21. Judg. 9. 33. c. 20. 19. c. 19. 8. Hos. 7. 6.
35. 3 [...]. Is. 5. 11. whereas as by a natural [Page 23] which insti [...]ct, and Gods command they usually begin appoint their work in the morning, not th [...]ir rest, as is Labourers evid [...]nt by Eccles 11. 6. In the morning sow to [...] thy seed, Mat. 20. 1, 2, 3. The Kingdome of begin their heaven is like to a man that is an housholder, work at which went out early in the morning to hire morning, Labourers into his vineyard, and by Gen. 19. 15 and [...]d it c. 28. 24. 54 44. 3. Exod. 20. 1. c. 18. 14. Judg.
a [...] 20. 19. Ruth 3. 13, 14. Psal. [...] 27. 2. 1 Chron.
Evening. 23 30. Mat. 27. 1. Psal. 104. 22. 23 Now the Sabbath being a day of rest from labour, and being likewise made for man, no [...] man for it. Mark. 2 27. and men naturally and ustomarily in all ages, all [...]ces, by Gods own ordination, determining their weekly labours, and beginning their rest at Evening; it is most fit, mo [...] proper, and convenient, in respect of men, and this their naturall use, that the Sabbath, and Lords day should begin at Evening, when as they voluntarily and naturally ce [...]se their secular labours, and devote themselves to r [...]st. But most unsuitable and inconvenient to begin it in the morning, the time when work begins, or at midnight, when half their rest is past. Neither is this reason to be sl [...]ighted; For all things being made for man, and the Sabbath too, no doubt but God did accommodate and suit them in such manner, as should be most commodious and convenient for men, and most consonant to the naturall course of their affairs. This Inchoation therefore of the Sabbath and Lords-day, being most proportionable to the naturall order of mens working, and rest (and so the more easie and possible to be observed by them) is no doubt the truest, the properest of all others; and therefore ought to be embraced.

4. That the beginning of the Sabbath, and Lord-day which is easiest for Christians to observe, and doth best of all begin the sanctification of them, is questionlesse, the best, the tru [...]st: But this beginning them at Evening is such:

1. Because men then naturally end their worldly employments, and begin their rest, [...]ven of their own accord without constraint: and what so easie, as that which is naturally and voluntary?

2. Because all men that have any Religion or shew of Christianity in them, do then constantly fall to [\[Page 24\]](#) their private devotions and family duties, the Evening being a fit time for holy meditations, prayers, and religious exercises, Gen. 24. 63. 1 Chron. 16. 14. 2 Chron. 13. 11. Psal. 55. 47. Psal. 65. 8 Dan. 9. 21. Now what time so fit to begin the Sabbath and Lords-day (appropriated wholly to Gods worship) as that whereon most Christians voluntarily and constantly apply themselves unto his immediate Service in their closets or in their familie devotions?

3. These dayes are dayes of bolynesse, and being such, ought alwayes to begin and end with holy duties. Every Christian will grant it fitting and convenient, if not necessary, that the Lords day should be begun and ended with private, and continued with holy, publick exercises, suitable to the day. Which being so, if it should begin and end at Midnight, what Christians usually do, or can conveniently begin & end it thus? they being then at rest yea fast asleep in their beds, & that by the course of nature, and Gods own appointment, without any sinne at all, 1 Thes. 5. 7. Mat. 25. 5, 6. c. 26. 45. And for men to be tied to rise up at midnight, or to sit up til then, to begin then the Mark 2 27.

Gen. 1 28,
29: 1 Cor.
3 21. 22
Heb. 2 7, 8. Psal. 8.
4, 5.

See
Eccles. 3.
1. [...]0 12.
1 Co [...].
Cor. 14.
33. 40.

Reason 4.

Exod. 20
8. to 12.
Isa. 58. 13
Deul. 5.
12. to 16.

Exod. 20.
8. to 12. 6.
31. 13, 14,
15. 6. 35.
[...]. Levit.
23. 2, 3, 4.
Deut. 5. 12
Isa. 58. 13.
Neh. 9. 14.

Acts 12. 6.
Hosea 7.

Lords-day, with holy duties, what an 6.
inconvenience & burthen would it be? Again if it should begin and determine at morning, so soon as day-light begins; how many Christians are then up through the whole year on Lords-day mornings, and the mornings following, to commence and conclude it with holy duties? yea what a vexation, and trouble would it be (especially to aged and sickly persons) to rise every Lords day, and Monday at day-dawning, or some space before, to begin and close it with meditations, prayers, praises, devotions? Certainly if the Lords-day should commence and end either at morning or midnight, and Christians were tied in point of conscience, to begin and conclude it with holy exercises, most men would grow weary of observing it, and cast off the sanctification of it as an intollerable burthen. But now if we begin and end it at Evening (when every man is up, and ends his labours, and goes unto his private [Page 25] devotions and familiar duties of his own accord, and then enjoy this rest as on other Evenings) how easily and conveniently without any toyl or inconvenience may all sorts of men begin and conclude it in an holy manner, without any disturbance of their na [...]rual sleep, or endangering their health? and how sweetly, how comfortably may they embrace the inception, and take their farewell of the conclusion of it? with what delight, pleasure, ease & conuenience, may they sanctifie it: This beginning and ending therefore of the Sabbath and Lords-day, being the easiest of all others, the best for all Christians to take hold of without any pain or inconvenience; the best for the true, & pious commencement and conclusion of these dayes with holinesse and devotion, is undoubtedly that which Godhimself hath instituted, and all Christians must retain; this being one main cause why God commanded the Jews to sanctifie their Sabbath, and keep their Festivalls from Evening to Evening; Lev. 23. 32. Exod. 12. 18. because the Evening in all the foreuamed respects, was most convenient and proper, to begin and end all sacred dayes.

As most affirm they are, who differ from me in this controversie.

Psal. 55.
17 & 141.
2.

5. The Lords-day (as all of the contrary opinion acknowledge) is substituted in the place of the seventh day Sabbath, in memoriall of our Sauours resurrection upon it: But that Sabbath (as the premises evidence) began and concluded at Evening: therefore the Lords-day should do so too, it being but the ancient weekly Sabbath transl [...]ted to another day; and there being no preceptnor president in Scripture, to begin the Sabbath or Lords-day at morning or midnight; but both Precepts and examples to commence and end it at Evening, as the foregoing Conclusions prove. The rather because It is confessed by all my Opposites in opinion; That the Lords-day succeedeth the seventh day Sabbath, & is to be weekly, wholly & intirely consecrated to Gods publick and private worship; and that by the very Equity and Morality of the fourth Commandement. Which is the received opinion not onely of most of our own Writers, who have written of the Sabbath or Lords-day, and commented on the fourth Commandement by learned Henry Bullinger, Decad. 2. c. 4. Joannes Pappus enar. in Isaia [Page 26]

Reason 5.

c. 58. and very many of the Learnedest Protestant Writers in forreign parts, quoted by learned Wallaeus in his Disputatio de Sabbato, to which I refer the Reader for fuller satisfaction; But likewise of the learnedest popish Schoolmen, Commentators, and writers of all sorts; as namely of Peter Lombard lib. 3. sententiarum: Distinctio 37. Richardus de media Villa, Joannes Scotus, Henricus de Veru-Maria, Christopherus, Silvestranus, Gulielmus Estius and others in lib. 3. Sententiarum. Distinct. 37. Dionysius Carthusianus, in lib 3. sententiarum. Distinct. 37. & in Exod Enarratio c. 20. where he thus writes. Memento ut diem Sabbati sanctifices, id est, in sanctis operibus diem illum expendas, & divino cultui arpticas eum: Per quod & nunc DIEI DOMINICI JUBETUR CELLEBRITAS. Bonaventura in lib. 3. sentent. Distinct. 37. Sermones de decem Praeceptis. Sermon. 4. operum, Tom. 7. p. 8. & speculum Animae c. 2. ibid. p. 35. where he determines thus. Per hoc autem in Lege NOSTRA DOMINICA intelligitur Observatio siquidem DIEI DOMINICI E [...]T DE JURE DIVINO, scilicet PRAECEPTUM DIVINUM, ut habetur in Exodo: Memento ut Diem Sabbati sanctifices, &c. sancti Raymundi Lumina. lib. 1. Tit. de Feriis ac Festis, p. 110. 111. acutè Thomas Aquinas in lib. 3. sentent. Distinct. 37. Artic. 5. & 2. Quaest. 122. Artic. 4. with all his fo [...]lowers on these places. Hugo Cardinalis Comment in Exod. [...]0. Tostatus Abulensis in Exod. 20. qu. 11, 12, 13. (an exc [...]llent pregnant Discourse to this purpose) and in 1. Regum Tom. 1. p. 128. Joannes Gerson Compendium Theologiae in 3. Praeceptum Operum Tom 2. p. 56. Astensis summa lib. 1. Tit. 22. De observantia Sabbati, Ang [...]lus de Clavatio, summa Angelica. Tit. Praeceptum sect. 2, 3, 7. Bernardinus senensis. Sermo. 10. de Observantia Sabbati, (an excellent, full, pious Discourse) Paulus de sancta Ma [...]jia, sc [...]lutini: Scripturarum, pars 1. Distinct. 8. c. 14. Antonius Cadubi [...]nsis Quastionarii lib 1 qu 5. Jacobus de Valentia adversus Judaeos. qu. 2. Soto, de justitia & jure, lib. 2. qu. 3. Art. 5 qu. 4 Domincus Bannes 2^a secundae qu. 44. Artic. 1. Didacus stella Comment in Luc. c. 14. Couarruinas, Resolutionum lib. 4. c 19. Conclus. 4. & 5. Joannis Nyder, as also Michael Marspurgiensis in 3. Praeceptum. Enchiridion Christianae institutionis, set forth by the whole Council of Colen, An. 1536 in 3. Praeceptum. f. 270. to 276. Hector Pintus: Comment. in Isaiam cap. 56. & in Ezech. [Page 27] cap. 20. Ambrosius. Catherinus Enar. in Genesis c. 2. p. 122, 123. Petrus Binsfeldius Enchiridion Theologiae Pastoralis pars 3. c. 10. p. 320. Cardinal Bellarmin, de cultu sanctorum, lib. 3. c. 11. Azorius the Jesuit. Instit. Moralium pars 2. lib. 1. c. 2. Lorinus Comment. in Deut. c. 5 p. 222, 223, 224. Petrus Vincentius de Marzilla, Annotatio in Exod. c. 20. Annot. 3. p. 249. Corne [...]jus à Lapide Comment. in Deut. 5. p. 975. Leonardus Marius Comment. in Exod. c. 20. Num. 47. p. 504. Vincentius Filiucius. Moralium Quaestionum. Tom. 2 in 3. Praeceptum Deoalogi c. 1. sect. 7. to 11 p. 250. &c. 2. p. 251. Ludovicus Ystella Comment. in Exod. 20. p. 124. To whom I shall annex our own irresragable English Doctors, Alexander Alensis, summa Theologie pars 3. qu. 32. Memb. 2. Nicholas de Lyra, a converted English Jew, Comment. in Exod. 20. John Peelham Archbishop of* Canterbury, and William Lyndwood Constit. Provincialium. lib. 1. de officio Archiepresbyteri, f. 40. 41. Thomas Waldensis; Doctrinale Fidei Tom. 3. Tit. 16. c. 140. De celebrando festivè, DIEM DOMINICUM sine mundanis operibus. The Flower of the Commandements of God on the third Commandement. Dives & Paurer on the third Commandement, c. 11. f. 120. printed in times of Popery: all of them resolving, the fourth Commandement to be Morall still in force, obliging all Christians under the Gospel to the weekly observation and sanctification of the intire Lords-day, That TOTUS ILLE DIES TOTALITER DIVINO CULTUI APPLICANDUS EST; & NIHIL ALIUD AGENDUM NISI DEO VACANDUM: and that because DIES INTEGER, & SABBATUM TOTUM cultui divino SACRATUR: not two or three hours of it onely devoted to the publick exercise of Gods worship in the Church as some new Doctors assent; who allot the rest to Sports, Pastimes, and wordly labours or affairs; being more lic [...]entious and prophane than Papists in this point, who are generally as strict as the greatest Puritane writers in their Doctrines, for their intire sanctification of the Lords day; and against the use of all ordinary labours, sports, pastimes, dancing, enterludes, and carnall pleasures on it or any part thereof, even from Evening to Evening, when they begin and end it. Now if the Lords-day it self, be thus to be [Page 28] sanctified and solemnized by Christiaans, even by the equity and Morality of the fourth Commaudemnt it self, literally commencing onely the sanctification of the seuenth day Sabbath, which began and ended alwayes at Evening. Then it must by the very equity and morality of the sourth Commandement, be sanctified and solemnized by Christians from Evening to Evening, as the seventh dae Sabbath was, both by Jews and Christians, heretofore by vertue of this Precept, which Reason our Opposites can no wayes evade.

6. Our opposites themselves, apply all Texts and precepts in the Old Testament, for the sanctification of the seuenth day Sabbath unto the Lords-day Sabbath, as being all one with it in substance. Why then should they or any other, reject that Text of Levit. 23. 32. From Even to Even ye shall celebrate your Sabbath. refuse the usuall Scripture computation of the beginning and ending all dayes, all Festivalls at Evening; and affix a new incep [...]ion or [...]nd to the Lord-day (and all other dayes too) at Morning or midnight, which the sacred Writ doth no wayes warrant: As therefore they apply most other things concerning the seventh day Sabbath to the Lords day, so must they now the time and Texts for its beginning too, unlesse they can give good Scripture reasons for it, which no man can do.

7. The beginning of the Lords-day and Sabbath at Evening, as soon as the Sun sets, or the Evening-star begins to shine, as it

Bish.
White. Dr.
Heylin Mr.
Ironside, in their Treatises and History of the Sabbath,
Dr. Joh.
Pocklingtons Sunday no Sabbath,
p. 6, 7.
printed sincei this was first penned,
see Canterburies Doom, p.
222, 223,
&c.

Reason 6.

is most certain, (whereas the beginning of it from the hour or moment of Christs Resurrection, Reason 7. which is not certainly known nor expressed by the Evangelists, is arbitrary and uncertain, and so not to be embraced:) so is it m [...]st consonant to that rest or Sabbath in heaven, of which these Sabbaths are a real type. Heb. 4. to 11. For our heavenly Sabbath ever begins in the very Evening, and Sunset of our dayes, when death puts a period to them, Rev 14. 13. Job 3. 17, 18. or at least at the Evening and period of this world, when dayes shal be no longer, Rev. 10. 6, 7. Therefore by the analogy of the type to the substance, those Sabbaths should begin at Evening too, when the day-light ends: the rather, because the Evening usually puts an [Page 29] end to our Labours, and begins our ordinary rest, as death (the Evening of our dayes) concludes our earthly toyls and travels, and commenceth our heavenly rest, Rev. 14. 13.

8. This beginning of the Sabbath and Lords day at Evening, doth best prepare men for the sanctification and duties of it, and most of all prevent the profanation of it. Reason 8.

For first it makes men to put a timely period to their weekly labours on Saturday Evening, and then to begin the sanctification of it with private meditations, prayer, singing of Psalms, reading the Scriptures, catcchifing of their children, and families, examination of their own hearts and wayes, and such like holy duties: where as the Doctrines of its beginning at midnight or morning light (as wofull everperience witnesseth) makes many spend a great part of the Satturday Evening and night, (when the Sabbath and Lords-day begin in true calculation) especially in Cities and market Towns, in buying, selling, drinking, gaming, who [...]ing, and such like worldly or carnall employments; which this Doctrine of its commencement at Evening would easily redresse.

2. It causeth men to go to bed, and take their rest In due season, to rise the more early in the morning, to come to the publick duties of Gods Worship, with greater chearfulnesse, and better Preparation, and so to receive more profit by them: to resort more timely to the Church, to dispatch their own private devotions, before they go to the publick Assemblies, and to be every way more holy and active: wheras the other Midnight or morning inception of it, makes Trades men & others to set up Saturday nights (as we erroneously both call and repute them, very late about secular, or vi [...]ious, sinfull employments (there being more sinnes for the most part, and disorders committed that Evening and night, then on any, or all the other six: to lie long in bed the Lords day morning; to come very late to Church, or not at all; to repair to publick duties without any, (or at least with small) preparation, bringing along with them heads, and hearts full of worldly cares, of sinfull thoughts, of [Page 30] unlamented iniquities, and as full of deadnesse, and drowfinesse; which makes them either to sleep out prayers and Sermons too, or not to observe and mind them, as they ought: all which the Evening, beginning thereof would readily & best prevent. Wherefore I may safely conclude, that the Sabbath and Lords-day ought of right to b [...]gin at Evening since God (being only wise) would certainly institute such an inchoation of them, as might best prepare and enable men to their Sanctification, and most anticipate their prophanation; the cause why he prescribed the celebration of the Sabbath from Even to Even, Levit. 23. 32. if I rightly conjecture.

Rom. 16.
27.

9. It is confessed by all, that in the Scripture and Israelites account, all dayes began at Evening, as I have proved at large before: It is likewise most certain that Christ and his Apostles being Israelites, did ever constantly observe the Scripture, and their own nationall computation of the beginning and end of dayes, it being that which Christ himself, and all the Evangelists follow, as I have evidenced at large, in the third and fifth Conclusions; neither is it any way probable that Christ and his Apostles, (or the Primitive-Church and Christians, who were in all things guided by them) did or would alter this their Nationall and divine beginning, or concluding of dayes, there being no ground or reason for it, for ought that yet appears. If therefore the Lords-day were instituted and consecrated for a Sabbath, by Christ himself, as many or by his Apostles, as most; or by the Primitive Church Christians onely, soon after the Apostles time, as others affirm; (one of which three opinions is and must be granted by them for undoubted truth) then it is most certain, that it must and did (at its very first institution and observation) begin and end at Evening (not at morning or Midnight or b [...]cause Christ himself, his Apostles, and the Primitive Church did ever constantly observe this computation; Therefore they would not, did not institute any other beginning of it, but this alone: which reason (in my poore weak apprehension) is so solid, that it admits of no evasion or reply. Lastly, That beginning and end of the Lords-day, which the Church & [Page 31]

Reason 9.

Reason 10.

people of God in all ages, from the first institution of the Lords-day to this present age, have constantly observed, and the Church and learned in those ages pofitively in expresse terms resolved, to be most true and genuine, is questionless the proper infallible inception & conclusion thereof (This no man I presume, either will or can deny.) But this beginning and ending of the Lords-day at Evening, which I here pl [...]ad for, is that which the Church and people of God in all ages, from the first in stitution of the Lords-day to this present age have constantly observed, and the Church and learned in those age, have positively in expresse termes resolved to be most true and genuine: none [...]ver oppngning i [...] till q [...] Wolphius, about some sixty years since, the first I find or hear of, that broached [...] is new opinion of its beginning at morning, because our Saviour did then rise again; whose authority and sophisticall reason (a meere Non sequitur, as I shall prove anon) hath s [...]duced and drawn over many unto his opinion, both in their judgements and practise too) Therefore it is questionlesse the proper infallible inception and Conclusion thereof. The Minor which is onely liable to exception (and may seem a Paradox to some, who over-rashly stile this Position of the Lords-dayes beginning at

Quicquid enim omnes vel plures, uno eodemque sensu, man festè, f [...]quenter, pe [...]s [...]veranter, v [...]lu [...] quodam sibi consentiente magistrorum Conc [...]lio accipi-ondo, Evening, an upstart novelty never heard of in the Church of God till this present age, in truth because th [...]mselves are ignorant in Antiquities, and versed onely in late modern writers, who fome [...]t the contrary Error, which I da [...]e affirm, to be the late sigment of some modern Auth [...]u [...]s, not once so much as heard of in any former ages, which I here challenge them to disprove:) I shall make good by unanswerable Reasons and Authorities, (as I conceit them) even from the very Apostles time to this present Century; and that in a Chronologicall method, beginning with the Primitive times, and so descending in order to this present age.

tenendo, tradend, fi [...] - maverint id pro indubitato rato, ritoque habeatur Vincentius Lirinensis. contra Haereses c. 39. q In his Chro-nol. l. 2. c. 1.

It is a Querie, not yet resolved amongst Divines, when and by whom the observation of the Lords-day for a Sabbath, was instituted? Some hold it was instituted by Christ himself between his Resurrection and Ascension: Others that it was instituted by the Apostles after Christe the Ascention, but at what certain time they do not accord. A third sort affirm, that it was ordained onely by the Primitive Church, and Christians a little after the Apostles times, or as the Council of Paris and others affirm, by the Council of Laodicea, about 360 yeares after Christ, but not by Christ or his Apostles. For my own part, as I shall not peremptorily resolve in this place, which of these opinions is the truest, it being not the scope of this present discourse: [...]eferring you to Mr. Sprint, Dr. Bownd, Mr. Widly, Mr. Dod, Mr. Cleaver, Mr. Bernard, Dr. Twisse, Bishop Andrews, the Practise of Piety, Mr. Elten and others, who have written of this subject, & on the fourth Commandement, for satisfaction herein, which requires a particular Tract. So I shall on the other side positively affirm, that let the Lords-day be instituted either by Christ himself, or the Apostles, or the Primitive Church and Christians succeeding next after the Apostles, about the end of the first Century after Christ, (at which ti [...]e it is clear by the testimonies of Ignatius, Clemens Alexandrinus, Justin Martyr, Tertullian, Irenaeus, Plinie, and others, that the Lords day was usally solemnized by Christians) yet the fi [...]st Institutors of it, and the Primitive Christians who first observed it, did ever begin and end it at Evening, which I shall make good by these reasons, (there being no direct convincing authority [...]ant, either when the Lords-day was first instituted, or [...]t what time it was first appointed to begin.)

Anno 1557. a pud Bochellum Decret. Eccles. Gal. l. 4. Tit. 10. c. 1. p. 596.

1. If Christ or the Apostles constituted it for a Sabbath, it is more then probable, if not certain, that they ordained it to begin and end at Evening.

Reasons.

1. Because they being all Jews, and ever exactly following the Scripture, and their own Nationall account, of commencing the day at Evening, as I haue formerly evidenced; we cannot conceive that they should institute any new beginning of the Lorde-day, at Midnight or Moruing, contrary to the Scripture, and their received Count [...]ey account, but that they still observed this usuall and divine computation, even in the Institution, and Solemnization of this day.

2. Because this beginning of this day being immutable, and in God the Fathers power onely to alter, not in theirs; it had been a presumption in them to change it, without a speciall Commission from him; the times being still in his power, even at Christs Ascension, not in Christs or his Apostles, Acts 1. 7. But we never read of any such Commission granted them to alter this day from Evening to morning, therefore it is presumption, yea folly to believe or assurm it.

[Page 33]

Dam. 2.
21.

3. Because the Lords-day (as all sides accord) was instituted in memory of Christs resurrection on the first day of the week. Now the first day (as I have manifested) began and ended at Evening in divine Evangelicall account, even as our Saviours Resurrection day; neither did his Resurrection on it alter its beginning from Evening to morning: Therefore the Lords-day being but the first day of the week, and having the same beginning and setting as Christs very resurrection day had, must begin, and end at Even, at its Primitive Institution and observation: neither did or could the Institution of th [...] first day of the week for a Sabbath, in memory of Christs Resurrection, change the beginning of the day, since Christs resurrection it self in the morning, (the supposed cause of this alteration) did it not.

4. Because Christ, or his Apostles▪ would never consecrate a day in memory of the Resurrection on it, within the compasse of which day Christ did not rise again: for that were a great absurdi [...]: But had they consecrated a Lords-day to begin at Morning from day-breaking, or from the very time that Christ ar [...]se (which is uncertain, unknown, and so this Lordsdayes beginning too) they had instituted such a Lords-day within the compasse of which Christ did not rise, he being risen before day-break, whiles it was dark Matth. 28. 2. John 20. 1. and his Resurrection being but the point, from which the day begins, and so not within it, on it, but before it. Therefore they instituted it to begin at Evening, not at morning.

5. It is certain, that Christ himself, his Apostles, and the Primitive Christians, for some good space of time did constantly observe the seventh day Sabbath, after Christs Passion, and Resurrection; the Evangelists, and Saint Luke in the Acts, ever stiling it, the Sabbath-day, (which name it yet retains in Latine) and making mention of its conscionable solemnization by the Apostles, and other Christians. Mark 16. 1. Luke 23. 56. See Mark 15. 42. and Luke 23. 54. Matth. 24. 20. Acts 1 12. c. 13, 14, 27. 42. 44. c. 14. 1. c. 15. 20, 21. c. 17. 1, 2, 10. and c. 18. 4. it being still solemnized by many Christians, after the Apostles times, even till the Council of Laodicea, about the year

Dies Sabbati being the Latin name for Saturday.

of our Lord 360. as Ecclesiasticall writers, and the 29th Canon of this Council testifie, which runs thus, Quod non oportet Christianos Judaizare, & otiare in Sabbato, sed operari in eodem die. (which many did refuse at that time to do:) Praeferentes autem in veneratione Dominicum diem (there being then a great Controversie among Christians, which of these two dayes, the seventh day Sabbath, or the Lords-day should have precedency, both of them being then observed by some) si vacare voluerint, ut Christiani hoc faciant; Quod si reperti fuerint Judaizare Anathema sint à Christo. Since theretofore the seventh day Sabbath was thus solemnized by Christ, the Apostles, and Primitive Christians, after the resurrection till this Laodicean Council did in a manner quite abolish the observation of it: it necessarily follows, that they began their Lords-day celebration at Evening. For the seventh day Sabbath, (as I have proved in the second Conclusion) did ever begin and end at Evening, and is so solemnized and begun by the Jews at this day: Wherefore they concluding this day at Evening, they must necessarily begin the Lords day then, because the first day of the week which they celebrated as the Lords-day, did then commence? the Evening following the seventh day Sabbath, being apart of it in their account, and one day ever necessarily beginning when the other ends. To these sive Reasons I might adde those others formerly alledg [...]d to Page 351 prove that the Lords-day ought to begin at Evening. All which being laid together, are an infallible proof; that admit the Lords-day instituted by Christ and his Apostles, yet it was ordained by them from the very first, to begin and end at Evening, and so to be solemnized, and that themselves did thus begin it. If it were onely instituted by the primitive Christians succeeding them, no question but they at first concluded, that it should be sanctified from Evening to Evening, many of them being Jews, who kept all their Sabbaths and Festivals from Evening to Evening, to whom the other Christians did readily conform in this particular, because it was the Scripture computation, even from the Creation, and for other premised Reasons. For the Apostles themselves, and other Christians condescending to them for a time, in the point of Circumcision, Purification, and other such Ceremonies, quite abrogated by Christs death, Acts 21. 20 to 28. 1 Cor. 9. 20. Gal. 2. 14, 15. c. 6. 12. would certainly concur with them in the beginning and ending of their Sabbaths, and sacred festivities, which were no wayes ceremoniall, nor altered, nor abrogated by Christs death. From which premises I conclude; that let the Lords-day be instituted, when or by whomsoever, yet it was ordained in its primary institution to be solemnized from Evening to Evening, and that it was sanctified in this manner by its originall Institutors. To put this out of question, I shall descend from the alledged

Surius Concil.

Tom. 1. p. 436.

Athanasius de interp. Psalmi & 302. A. & Homilia De semente p. 365. Ignatius Epist. 6. Bibl. Patr. Tom. 1. p 81. & Epist. 8. p. 84. E. Clemens Romanus, Constit. Apost. I. 2. c. 63. I. 7. c. 36. I. 8. c. 39 Surius Concil Tom. 1. p. 68. 105, 110. a. Primasius Comment in Retor. 83. Sozomenus Histor. Ecclesiast. I. 7. c. 19, Tom. Bibl. Pat. 5. pars 2. p. 435. F. 6. Socrates Scholasticus Ecclesiast. hist. lib 5. c. 21. p. 35. 3. Nice phorus callist. Eccles. Hist. lib. 12. c. 34 p. 357. Centur. Magdeburg.

reasons, to direct Authorities, culling out some few of the chiest in all ages, and pretermittting all the rest for brevity sake. I shall begin with the ancientest first, and so proceed in order to our present times.

The first Authority I shall insist on, is, that of Acts 21. 7, 8, 11. (which many object against me, though it be most pregnant for me) And upon the first day of the week, when the Disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow, and continued his speech untill Midnight: And there were many lights in the upper chamber where they were gathered together, &c. When therefore he was come up again, and had broken bread, and eaten, and talked a long while, even till break of day, so he departed. This is the very first and best Scripture Authority properly alledged for the solemnization of the Lords-day, by the Apostles and Christians of that age, who began the celebration thereof at Evening, not at morning or midnight, as is plain by this Text.

1. Because their solemnizing of it begun no doubt at that time, when as they came together to break bread; that is, to receive the Sacrament, as most, or to keep their Agape or Love-feasts, as others interpret it; or rather (in truth) to do both: But the Christians in that time did both celebrate the Sacrament and keep their Love-Feasts at Evening, in imitation of our Saviour, who first instituted and kept the Sacrament at Evening, after Supper, Luke 22, 20. John 13. 2, 4. c. 21. 20. whence it is called the Lords Supper, 1 Cor. 11. 20. See Luke 14. 12, 16, 17, 24. Rev. 19. 9. 17. This is manifest by 1 Cor. 11. 20, 21. When ye come together therefore into one place, this is not to eat the Lords-Supper: for in eating every one taketh his own supper; and one is hungry and another is drunken: Now this Text styling the Sacrament, the Lords Supper, and informing us, that the Corinthians did usually receive it after they had eaten their own Suppers; and that some were drunk when they came to receive it (and in those times, They that were drunk, were drunk in the night, 1 Thes. 5. 7.) ascertains us, that this their coming to receive the Sacrament and keep their Love-feasts, was at Evening or candletining, when it was Supper time.

2. Because the Text saith, There were many lights in the upper room where they were gathered together; and that Paul preached from the time of their coming together till midnight: Both which do manifestly declare their Assemblies begun at Evening, as they anciently

Centur. 1.
pars 2.
cap. 6 col
493. I. 50.
503. De Festis, Centur. 4.
c. 6. col.
410 c. 15.
col. 1466.
Centur. 5.
c. 6. col.
648.
Centur. 8.
c. 6. Col.
342. I. 40.
Beda in Lucae Evangelium.
I. 2. cap 4.
Tom. 5.
Col. 263.
Apost.
Canon.
Can. 65.
Surius
Concil.
Tom. 1. p.
30 Chrysost.
Hom. 11.
in Gen. 2.
Tom. 1.
Col. 58 B.
C.
Synodus Parisiensis, Anno 1557. apud Bochellum.
Decret.
Eccles.
Gal. p.
598.
Concilium Laodicense.
Diem Sabbathi in diem Dominicum mutavit, ne Judaismum imicare videremur, writes this did, because there were many lights in the room where they met, which were lightted (as the Text insinuates) before, or so soon as they assembled in it: and because it is not probable that Paul (who begun his Sermon when they came together, as the words imply) did preach from Midnight, or the morning before, till midnight following, there being never such a Sermon heard of: but onely from Candle tining till midnight, the space of four or five hours.

[Page 36]

3. Because the Christians in the next succeeding ages, (as is manifest by Plinie and Tertullian) did begin their Christian meetings, and Love-feasts at Evening, whence they likewise stiled them a Supper; which Tertullian thus describes, Coena nostra de nomine rationem suam [...]stendit. Vocatur enim Agape, id quod penes Graecos dilectio est. Non prius discumbitur quam oratio ad Deum praegustetur: Editur quantum convenientes capiunt; bibitur quantum pudi [...]is est utile: ita saturatur, ut qui meminerint, etiam PER NOCTEM adorandum sibi Deum esse: which shews that they began their Feasts and Christian exercises, (which he here conjoyns) at Evening, and continued them all night, as Saint Paul, and the Disciples at Troas did. (Which meetings Theophilus Alexandrinus in his Epist. Paschalis 3. 3. Bibl. Patrum, Tom. 4. p. 723. calls Vespertina congregatio.) Post aquam manulem ac LUMINA (which manifests they kept their Assemblies by Candle light, and so begun them at Evening) ut quisquis de scripturis sanctis, vel de proprio ingenio potest, provocatur in medio Deo canere; (which Plinie the second stiles, carmenque Christo, quasi dicere secum invicem;) hinc probatur quomodo bibent. A [...]què oratio convivium di [...]imit: Inde lis disceditur, non in catervas caesionum, neque in Classes discursationum, nec in [...]ruptiones laseivorum, sed ad eandem [...]juram modestiae, & pudicitiae, ut qui non tam coenam coenaverint, quam disciplinam.

[Page 37]

Which usage well explains this place of the Acts. It being apparent then (as the subsequent Antiquities will more abundantly manifest) that this meeting of the Disciples at Troas, and Pauls preaching to them began at Evening. The sole doubt will be what evening this was? whether that which we call Sunday night (as many erroneously mistake) or Saturday night? (which is the Lords-day night if any:) For my own part I conceive clearly, that it was upon Saturday night, (as we falsely call it) not the ensuing Sunday night. For admitting the Lords-day was then instituted for a Sabbath) (which those of the [Page 38] opposite opinions grant and I consent to) there will be no great question of it.

Council of Paris.

See Breutius in Levit.
23. 2. and 25 8.

About Ann.
Christi 56.

See Centur.
Magd. 2. l.
2. c. 6.
Col. 493. accordingly, cent. 2. c.
6. col. 120.
Augustinus de tempore,
S [...]r. 25
1. Ter-tullians Apology.
c. 39.

See Acts 20. 31.

Epist. l.
10. Epist.
97.

Apolog. c.
39.

Epist. l.
10. Epist.
97.

1. Because if the Christians at Troas observed this first day of the week as their Sabbath, no doubt but this their meeting to solemnize it, and receive the Sacrament on it, was rather that Evening which began, than that which ended the Lords-day, in their account; else they should have begun its solemnization onely when it ended, whi [...] is improbable. But our Sunday Evening (on which some affirm this meeting) ended, not commenced the Lords-day in their account, they ever beginning their dayes the Evening before, as the premises manifest: Therefore this Assembly, was on our Saturday Evening, there being no mention of any meeting, the day or Evening before.

2. Because the Christians, in the next succeeding ages, (as I shall prove by the following testimonies) did ever begin their Lords-day assemblies and solemnities on Saturday Evening; solemnizing it from Evening to Evening, because the first observers of it did so. Therefore it is more than probable, that these Christians at Troas did so too.

3. Because Saint Luke records that it was upon the first day of the week, when this Meeting was, and this Sermon of Pauls made; therefore it must needs be on the Saturday, not on our Sunday Evening, since the Sunday Evening in S. Lukes, and Scripture account, was no part of the first, but of the second day; the day ever beginning and ending at Evening, in their computation, as the premises evidence.

4. All my opposites confesse, that the Disciples met at this time, upon the first day of purpose to sanctifie it for a-Sabbath; and can they then think that they would defer their meeting till our Sunday Evening, when all the day in their accompt (and the best, the chiefest part of it in their compute, who begin it at midnight or morning) was expired? Certainly, this had been to make the Lords-day no Festivall day at all, or at most not so much as an half-holy day; which we cannot presume these Disciples, and S. Paul would dodid they observe it [Page 39] as their Sabbath: From all which reasons I may more then probably conclude, that it was the Saturday Evening (when the Lords-day began) not the Sunday night (when it ended) when this Divine Assembly was kept; the rather because they received not the Sacrament, nor brake this bread till after midnight, as the Text affirms; and so after the Lords-day ended even in the accompt of such who affirm it ends at midnight: And because this beginning of their Assembly when the day begins, makes most for the Apostolical divine Institution and sanctification of the Lords day; for the which this Text will little avail, if this Assembly on it, were on our Sunday night, when the day was either wholly or for the most part expired, and so this meeting no warrant for its totall sanctification.

But against this it will be objected, First, that Saint Paul departed from Tro [...] the very next morning at day-break; which he would not have done, had it been part of the Lords-day, for he would not have taken this journey then, I [...]st he should have prophaned it.

Besides, the Text saith, That he was ready to depart on the morrow; which signifieth another day, not the same: therefore this night must needs be our Sunday night, his departure being on the morrow, to wit on our Monday, the next day after it.

Objection.

To this I answer, First, that it is clear by Acts 20. 6. that Saint Paul [...] came to Troas upon the Lords-day: For he stayed there seven dayes, And upon the first day of the week, he thus preacheth till midnight, ready to depart in the morning: so that the first day was the last of those seven dayes, and [...]he first day of the week preceding it, the day on which he came to Troas: Paul therefore might as well depart on this day from Troas, as he came unto it thereon. And that without prophanation of the day: for he came and went by ship, verse 6. 13, 14. and so might sanctifie the rest of the day a ship board, (as our marriners and passengers who sail on the Lords-day, as well as other dayes, use to do) because the wind and [...]ide then serving, and the ship in which he was to sail, being to depart that [Page 40] morning, there was a necessity for him then to go a ship board, else he might have lost his passage: which necessity and circumstance of sai [...]ing away that day, made this his departure on it, no violation of the day: works of necessity, being no breach of the Sabbath, as Christ himself, and all Divines resolve: the rather here, because he might preach and spend the rest of the day in the ship as profitably as on the shore, and the Mariners might likewise now set sail (the wind and weather serving) without prophanation of the day, as they still usually do in all places.

Answer.

Mat. 12. 1.
to 13.
Luke 14 3.
to 6. John
7. 22 23.

2. I answer, that the Morrow, hath a double signification in Scripture. Sometimes it is taken for the next Evening or naturall day: Other times it is taken for the next morning or day-light, or that which we usually call day, in opposition to the night: not for the next naturall day, which begins at Evening, but the next artificiall day of twelve houres day light, which begins at Morning. In this sense it is used most commonly in Scripture, witnes Levit. 22. 30. When ye will offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving to the Lord a [...] your own will: on the same day it shall be eaten up; ye shall leave none of it untill the morrow: compared with Levit. 7. 25. which speaking of the same offering, saith, He shall not leave any of it till the morning. (See Exod. 12. 10. c. 16. 19, 23, 24. where there is the same expression) In which Texts the Morrow, is nothing else but the morning following: for had this offering been at Evening, or night, whenthe naturall day begins in Scripture accompt, yet they might, not have reserved any of it till the Morning, for that had been to morrow, as morrow is opposed to the night not to the naturall day. So in 1 Sam. 19. 11. Saul sent Messengers to Davids house that night to watch and to slay him in the morning: and Michall told him, saying, if thou save not thy life to night, to morrow thou shalt b [...] slain. Where morrow is not put for another naturall day (that morrow in Scripture and the Jews account being part of that naturall day, of which this night was the beginning) but onely for the day-light, or artificiall day, being the same naturall day on which [Page 41] these words were spoken. Thus it is used in 2 Sam. 11. 9, 12, 13, 14. Esther 2. 14. So Zeph. 3. 3. Her Judges are Evening-wolves, they gnaw not the bones till the morrow, that is, till the morning following. And Acts 23. 31. 32. Then the Souldiers

See Mat.
6. 34. Luke
13. 32 33.
1 Sam. 9, 16 19. [...]
5. 3, 4.
Jan. 4. 13.
14.

took Paul by night and brought him to An [...]ipatris: on the morrow they left the horsemen to go with him. In all which places the morrow is put onely in opposition to the preceding night, and for the day light following; (which night and morrow make up the same naturall day) not for the beginning of the next en [...]uing naturall day, or for another day. Hence the Scripture useth this phrase: The morrow after that day, or after the Sabbath. Levit. 23. 11, 15. Josh 5. 12. 1 Chron. 29, 21. because there is a morrow opposed to the night, wherein a thing is done or spoken, which is a part of the same naturall day, that the night is. In this sence morrow must needs be taken here: for this meeting beginning but at night, and Paul continuing his Preaching untill midnight following, ready to depart on the morrow: this morrow was nothing but the next morning; which was a part of that fi [...]st day, on which the disciple met, as it was a naturall day consisting of twenty four houres, and beginning but that Evening; not another day of the week, or our Monday morning, as some affirm. This morrow therefore being but the next morning, and opposed to the night onely, (not to the naturall day on which this Assembly was kept at Troas; and this night being part of the fi [...]st day of the w [...]ek (which as a natural day in Scripture accompt b [...]gan at Evening) could be no other but the Lords-day morning, not the Monday following; and this meeting ([...]s the promised Reasons prove) could be no tim [...] else, but our Sa [...]u [...]day night, notwithstanding this O [...]j [...]ction. So that I may safely conclude, that Saint Paul and the Christians of Troas (the fi [...]st solemnizers of the Lords-day that we [...]lead of) did begin its solemnization at Evening, not at morning or Midnight: Wherefore we ought to begin it then. This is my first Authority in point of practise, to prove, that the Primitive Christians began the [Page 42]

My next evidence is that of Plinie the second, who writes thus to the Emperour Trajan, concerning th [...] time, and manner of the Christians solemnization of the Lords day. Soliti erant STATO DIE ANTE LUCEM CONVENIRE carmenque Christo, quasi Deo dicere secum invicem; Seque SACRAMENTO non in scelus aliquod, astringere, sed ne furta, ne latrocinia, ne adulteria committerent, ne fidem fallerent, ne depositum appellati denegarent, &c. By which it is evident, that the Christians in that age (a time of persecution) and after ages too, did usually meet together to receive the Sacrament, and perform their holy Exercises, at night, when it began to grow dark, and concluded them at day-light or about day-break, (as the disciples did at Troas, Acts 20. 7. to 12.) which Assemblies some Ecclesiasticall Histories call, Antelucani coetus; Night-Assemblies, or meetings, before day light; not because they began in the morning about day-break, as some would have it; but because they both began and ended be [...]ore day-dawning; the Christians in that time of persecution, not daring to meet publicly in the day time for fear of apprehension. Now this set night on which they Epist. I.

10. 96.
Epist.

Ann. Dom.
106.

See Centuriae
Magd 4. c
6. Col.
140. Theo- doret.
Eccles.
Hist. I. 2.
c. 13.
Socrates Scholasticus
Hist. I. 6.

kept those Assemblies was not our Sunday, but our Saturday night, on which our Saviour arose whiles it was dark: and in Honour of his Resurrection did they begin and keep their Lords-day solemnization, on this night, not the night ensuing, as is evident by Justin Martyrs second Apology, with other ensuing testimonies. And these their night conventions were the Occasion of those slanderous imputations which the Gentiles cast upon the Christians; that after their Exercises of Religion ended, they did use to put out the lights (used to expell the darknesse of the night, Acts 20. 8.) and then couple promiscuously one with another, yea murder and eat up children, and commit all manner of villany. Since therefore they began their Lords-day exercises at Evening, before day light began; as this Heathen Authour and all Ecclesiasticall Historians writing of this age, accord; we need not doubt, but the day in their acc [...]mpt Page 431 did then begin; since they would not begin the exercises of the day till in truth it began.

c. 8. Sozomenus Hist. Eccles. I. 8. c. 21 Victor de Vandalica persecutione. I. 2. Cent. Magd. 5 c. 2. Col. 647, 648.

See Tertulliani Apologia, Justine Martyrs Apologies, Anaxagoras Oratio pro Christianis.

Anno 200.

My third Authority is that of Tertullian about 200 years after Christ; in his A [...]ol [...]gy for the Christians, c. 38, 39. (the words whereof I have already alledged) and de Corona militis c. 3. where he writes thus. Eucharistiae Sacramentum in tempore victus, & mandatum à Domino, ANTELUCANIS CAETILUS, nec de aliorum manu quam praesidentium sumimus: w^{ch} expresly shews; that the Christians of that age did begin their publick Lords day meetings, and Love feasts in the Evening, and spending the Saturday night (as we falsly deem it) in Gods worship, receiving the Sacrament and other holy duties; which night assemblies he stiles, Nocturnae Convocationes; because they spent the greatest part of that night in them: nocturnae properly, not morning, or early risings and mee [...]ings before day, but a watching or fitting up all night, without going to bed, or taking rest, as the common proverb, Nocturnae lucubrationes periculosissimae sunt; compared with its opposite Adagie, Diluculo surgere saluberimum est; and Isa. 30. 29. Luke 2. 8. c. 5. 5. c. 6. 12. John 3. 2. Gen. 31. 39, 40. Num. 14. 1. Josh. 10. 5. Prov. 31. 18. Psal. 119. 75. with other Scriptures, testifie.

Ad exam. lib. 2. cap. 3. See Augustinus de t [...]mpore, Sermo 251.

But to passe by examples, and come to direct Authorities.

4. My fourth testimony is that of Athanasius, the great Anti-Arrian Bishop of Alexandria Quaestiones ad Antiochum: Quaest. 52, 53. p. 380. Neque contra nos afferrent Judaei, quod in Sabbat [...] surrexerit Christus, ideo eorum or a longe ant [...] obturavit Deus, lege illis data; ut A VESPERA OR [...]JINENTUR DIEM SABBA [...]I. Cur hanc [...]b causam & nobis Deus praecepit, A VESPERA SABBATI ORDIRE DOMINICUM? Responsio. Non ob eam causam: sed

Anno 340.

postquam Deus Gentes ex tenebris ignorantiae, & ex lege ad Lucem cognitionis Dei & Evangelii vocavit; Convenienter san [...] nobis PRAECEPII Resurrectionis ipsius diem, A VESPERA INCHOARE & ad Lucem perducere. INDECORUM enim, & INCONCINNUM FUERAT A LUCE ORDIRI, & in noctem & tenebris desinere Christi verae lueis [Page 44] dies A most express resolution, that the Lords-day ought to begin from Saturday Evening, and that it is both unseem [...]y and unfit to begin it from the morning. Answerable to which is that of Anselm. Enarrationes in Math. 28. v. 1. 2 Operum, Tom. 1. p. 116. O do temporum habet, ve [...]peran magis tenebrescere in noctem qu [...] lucescere in di [...]m: sec mysticè dicit lucescere, pro gloria resu [...]jionis immin [...]n [...]jis. Huc usq [...]e dies noctem dicebatur praecece [...]. Nunc ordo mutatur & NOX QUA SURREXIT, D [...]E [...], QUA SE OSTENDIT, ADJUNCTA EST. Et congruè [...] us drem nox s [...]u [...]batur, quia à luce homo in tenebr as cecide [...]. NUNC VERO DIES SEQUITUR NOTEM, quia per Resurrectionem à peccatis ad vitam reducimur. Which Passage is almost verbatim recorded by Haymo Halberstatensis Homiliarum pars Aestivalis; Coloniae 1531. Hom. in die sancto Paschatis p. 7. 8. and by Christianus Grammaticus Expositio in Matthaeum Evangelistam (c. 28 v. 1.) Bibl. Patrum Tom. 9. pars 1. p. 491. D. E. by Zacharias Crysolitanus in unam ex quatuor Bibl Patum Tom. 12 p [...]rs 1. p. 203, 204. A. Isidor Hispalensis de natura [...]Jerum. c. 1. p. 246. Gratian. sentent l 2 Distinct 13. E. and others.

My fifth Authority is [...] C [...]uncil of Laodicea, about the year of Christ 360. whic [...] as i [...] first settled the observation of the Lords-day, and prohibited, abolished the keeping of the Jewish S [...]b [...]h under an Anathem [...]. Can. 49. fo [...]i [...]ed So it th [...] posi [...]ively Anno 360. determined: Ut A VESPERA USQUE AD VESPERAM DIES DOMINICA SERVETUR: as is recorded Capit. Caroli & Ludovici Imperatorum. lib. 1. c. 15. collected by Ansegisus & Benedictus Levita; & Fredericus Lindebrogus Codex Legum Antiquarum p. 833.

My sixth Evidence is the expresse testimony and resolution of Saint Augustine, the eminentest of all the Fathers, De Tempore Sermo 251. Observemus ergo. diem Dominicam Fratres, & sanctificemus illam, si [...]ut antiquis praeceptum est de Sabbato. (Levit. 23. 32.) A VESPERA USQUE AD VESPERAM celebrabitis Sabbata vestra. Videamus ne otium nostrum vacuum sit; Sed A VESPERA DIEI SABBATI USQUE AD VESPERAM DIEI DOMINICAE sequestrati à ruralt [Page 45] opere, & ab omni negotio, solo divino cu [...]ui vacemus. Ve [...]iat ergo cu [...]cunque possibile sit ad VESPE [...]NAM atque NOCTVRNAM CELEBRATIONEM, & [...]r [...]t ibi incouveni Ecclesiae pro peccatis suis D [...]um, &c. An authority so full for the celebration of the Lords day from Evening to Evening, in that age, that it cannot be shifted nor avoyd [...], and a direct resolution in expresse Terms of our present Qu [...]stion.

My seventh. is Pope Leo the first, Epistolarum Decretalium Epistola 79. which y [...]u shall find in the second part of his own works, in Juo Carnotensis Decretalium, pars 6. c. 71. Gratian. Distinctio 75. & de Consecratione Distinctio 3. & in Surius Conciliorum Tom. 1 p. 789. where he thus resolves our Question: Quod ergo à patribus nostris propensiore cura novimus esse servatum, à vobis quoque volumus custodiri, ut non passim diebus omnibus Sacerdotalis ordinatio celebretur, sed post diem Sabbati, ejusdem noctis quae in prima Sabbati lucescit exordia deligantur, hoc est sub Lege Divini officii substuantur, in quibus his qui consecrandi sunt jejunis, & [...]jejunantibus, Sacra benedictio conferatur. Quod ejusdem observantiae erit, si mane ipso Dominico die continuato Sabbati jejunio celebratur à quo tempore PRAEDECEDENTIS NOCTIS INITIA NON RECEDUNT; QUAM AD DIEM RESURRECTIONIS, sicut etiam in Poscha Domini declaratur. PERTINERE NON EST DUBIUM. So that it was past all dis [...]ure, and doubt in his time, that the Lords day began at Evening, and that our Saturday night was part of it. Then it follows. Nunquam benedictiones nisi in Die Demini [...]ae Resurrectionis tribuuntur, CUI A VESPERE SABBATI INITIUM CONSTAT ASSCRIBI From which Text of his, Juo Carnotensis: Anno Dom 1100 Gr [...]tian Anno 1170. in their for [...]n [...]med pl [...]ces, together with Panormitan, Antonius de Bru [...]jio, Joannis Thye [...]jey, Bartholomeus Brixienensis: and all other Can [...]nists in their Glosses on the fore-quoted Texts of Gratian (where these words of Leo are recited) resolve without dispute: QUOD DIES DOMINICA INITIUM HABET A VESPERA SABBATI: quod probat per consuetudinem, & etiam per doctrinam Apostolicam. Quod VESPERA PRAEDECEDENTIS NOCTIS [Page 46] TRAHITUR ADDIEM SEQUEM, ut sive de vespere in Sabbato, sive de mane in Dominico ordines conferantur, semper in die Dominico videantur conferri: All of them according, that the Lords-day begins and ends at Evening, not at morning or Midnight. A truth so clear in that age, as it was past all doubt, the Scots and Irish Christians about the year 597. and before, beginning the Lords-day at Evening, as Bishop Usher attests.

Presbyteri verò ad vesperam, quae magis ad Dominicam pertinet, consecrantur, Honorius Augustodanensis, de antiqu [...] rit [...] Miss. l. c. 19. Patr. Tom 12. pars 1. p. 1043.

See Bishop Ushers Treatise of the Religion professed by the ancient Irish. c. 4. p. 34. Edit. 1631. Anno 610.

My eighth Testimony, is the second Council of Mascon, Canon 1. apud Surium; Concil. Tom. 2. pag. 682, 683. Custodite diem Dominicam quae nos denuò peperit, & à peccatis omnibus liberavit. Nullus vestrum litium fomitibus vacet, &c. Estote omnes hymnis & laudibus Dei animo corporeque intenti. Si quis vestrum proximam habet Ecclesiam, properet ad eam, & ibi Dominico die semetipsum precibus, lachry misque afficiat. Sint oculi manus (que) vestri toto illo die ad Deum expansae. Then it follows; NOCTEM QUOQUE IPSAM quae nos insperatae luci inaccessibili reddidit (to wit our Saturday night before Easter, on which Christ rose again) SPIRITUALIBUS EXIGAMUS EXCVBIIS: NEC DORMIAMUS IN EA, SED OREMUS & VIG [...].LEMUS OPERIBUS SACRIS, ut digni haberemur cohaeredes fieri in regno Servatoris. Which Canon proves, that the Christians of that age did solemnize our Saturday night (before Easter especially) and sp [...]nd it all in holy vigils, prayers, and religious exercises, because Christ rose upon it, accounting it a part of the Lords-d [...],y, and beginning their Lords-day exercises on it, not on our Sunday night.

My ninth Proof is, the fourth Council of Toledo in Sp [...]in, Canon 8. Apud Surium. Tom. 2. p 729 Lucerna & Cereus in pervigiliis, apud quasdam Ecclesias non benedicuntur & eur à nobis benedicantur, Anno 620. inquirunt Propter GLORIOSUM enim NOCTIS ILLIUS SACRAMENTUM hae [...] sol mniter benedicimus, ut SACRAMENTUM SACRAE RESURRECTIONE [...]S CHRISTI MYSTERIUM QUOD TEMPORE HUIUS NOCTIS VOTIVE ADVENIT, BENEDICTIONEM SUSCIPIAMUS. Et quia haec observatio per multarum loca terrarum [Page 47] Regiones (que) Hispaniae in Eccles [...]is commendatur, dignum est ut propter unitatem pacis, & Gallicanis Eccles [...]is conservetur. Nulli autem impune erit, qui hoc contempserit, sed Patrum regulis sub acebit. By which Canon it is most apparent, that the Christians of this age did solem [...]ize our Saturday night with holy vi [...]jls, prayers and exercises of Religion, beginning their Publick Assemblies and Lords-dayes duties on it, because the glorious Sacrament, and Mystery of Christs Resurrection hapned on it, the blessing whereof they expected to r [...]ceive by this nights sanctification. Therefore questionlesse they began their Lords-day at Evening, and made this night onely, not our Sunday night, parcell of it; because Christ in their accompt did rise again upon it. Neither was the celebration of this night the practise onely of some few private Churches, but of all Christian Churches in that centurie, since this Councell layes it down as a prevailing argument, why all Churches should consecrate their Candles and Tapers on it, as well as the Spanish Church, and Churches in France; which had been no motive at all, had not the solemnization of this night in memory of Christs Resurrection, been universall, though the superstitious Ceremonie of Hallowing Lights and Tapers on it was not so. Which general received practise of solemnizing this night, & spending it thus, in vigils & prayrs, even from the apostles time, till long after this Councill, is a satisfactory argument to me, that Saint Pauls and the Disciples meeting at Troas upon the first say of the week (where they spent the whole night together in preaching and other Christian exercises Acts 20. 1, 9, 10, 11) was on our Saturday, not Sunday night, it being no doubt the originall pattern from whence this custome sprung which this Councill mentions.

My tenth Evidence is the expresse inanswerable Authority of Anastatius Sinaita, Anagogicarum Contemplationum lib. 2. Quaest. 86. 152. 153. Bibl. Patrum Tom. 6. pars 1. p. 634. E. 778. 795. Propterea Scriptura Anno 640. tenebras ponit ante lucem, quoniam prius eram in errore, deinde transeamus ad lucem. Propterea

PRIOR EST VESPERA, DEINDE DIES. LEGE EST [Page] CONSTITUTUM (it seems there was then some expresse Law and Canon for i [...] in force; as these forecited) UT INCIPERETUR A VESPERA, DOMINICA, quoniam à morte objeu [...]ja, proce [...]imus ad lacem Resurrectionis. NOS DOMINICAM A VESPERA SABBATI AUSPICAMUR (so that [...]) was the constant practise of Christians in that age to begin the Lords day on Saturday at Evening QUEMLIBET D [...]JEM A VESPERA COMPUTARE, ET CUM PRAE [...]EDENTE NOCTE SEU UNUM COPU [...]RE SOLEMUS (which last word implies a constant Custome in that time) Sedenim & Moyses vaeationem à laboribus in Sabbato it a d [...]scripsit, UT ET PRAEEDENTE NOCTE, ET SEQUENTI DIE OTIUM AGERENT. Testes do Judees QUI USQUE INHODIERNUM DIEM ID OBSRVANT. Qui [...]pe qui non illam noctem quae Sabbatum subsequitur, SED illā QUAE ANTEGREDITUR cessatione ab operibus quiete colunt. (this therefore was and is the Jewish and Scripture computation) ET NOS IN OBSERVATIONE DIEI DOMINICI PRAEEDENTEM NOCTEM TANQUAM CUM DIE COPULATAM, ET NON SEQUEMTEM NOCTEM VENERAMUR. An Evidence so expresse, so punctuall, as may satisfie all the Opposites, and cannot be evaded.

My eleventh Testimony, is the positive Resolution of an whole Generall Council, and so by consequence, of all Christian Churches in that age; to wit, the sixth Generall Council of Constantinople, Can. 56 Surius Anno 670. Conciliorum. Tom. 2. p. 1052. Dominicis genu flectere à divinis nostris PATRIEUS, Christi Resurrectionem honorantibus, canonicè accepimus (The first generall Council of Nice, Canon 20. having so decreed:) Ne ergo hujus observationis evidentiam ignoremus, fidelibus manifestum fa [...]imus, QUOD POST VESPERTINUM SACERDOTUM AD ALTARE SABBATO INGRESSUM, EX CONSUE [...]UDINE QUAE SERVATUR NEMO GENU FLECTIT USQUE AD SEQUEMTEM VESPE [...]AM, IN QUA POST INGRESSUM IN VESPERTINO SEU COMPLETORIO, GENUA [Page 49] RURSUS FLECTENTES, DOMINO PRECES OFFERIMUS, Servatoris enim nostri Resurrectionis veluti praecursorem NOCTEM quae suit ante Sabbatum, accipientes, HYMNIS AB EA SPIRITU ALITER INCIPIMUS: Festum ex tenebris in lucem finientes, ut in persecto ae integro DIE AC NOTCE, nos Resurrectionem celebremus. A most full unanswerable Authority, if a li [...]tle explained. It was the received Custome of the Primitive Church, as this Canon & all Antiquity witnes, to pray standing not kneeling, all the whole Lords-day in memory of our Saviou [...]s Resurrection, & standing up again from the dead: Whence these their Lords-day Exercises were called, Stationes (à stando; in English Stations) because they ever stood, and never kneeled in them. Now this Custome of praying standing, used onely on the Lords-day, and between E [...]ster and Ascension day, began and ended with the day. The question then will be, when, and at what time of the day, this praying standing, began and ended? This Canon resolves it in plain terms, (and that by way of Declaration onely, not of new Constitution,) that all the Churches

See Tertullian and others

and Christians of this age (ex consuetudine quae s [...]rvatur) even by an ancient long continued Custome received from the Christians and Church [...]s of former ages; and then observed onely, not begun; did alwayes begin to pray standing, after their Saturday Vespers, or Evening prayers were ended, (to wit, at the time of the Evening, when the day in divine and naturall accompt begins) and concluded them after the Lords-day Vespers, or complein ended, to wit, the Lords-day at Evening, when the Lords day doth properly and truly end. By which it is most apparent, that they began and e [...]d [...]d their Lords-day and Lords-day exercises at Evening, not at morning or Midnight; and that it was the constant custome of all Christians in former ages so to do. Again it assures us, that it was the custome of all Churches, then, and in foregoing times, to couple the Saturday night, and the Lords-day together, and to solemnize them in memory of Christs Resurrection, as one intire Lords-day; b [...]inning and spending all the Saturday night with Hymnes and spirituall duties. So that [Page 50] this Council is a most clear satisfactory proof both in point of Doctrine and practise, that the Lords-day ought to begin and end at Evening, and was actually so observed by all Christians of this and former ages. I wonder therefore why some, who think themselves learned, should so far for [...]et themselves, as to call it an upstart Novelty, not heard of in the Church till now of late, it being ever the received doctrine and practise too, of all Churches, Christians, till within 70 years last past.

My twelfth Proof is the famous English Council at Berghamstede, under Withred King of Kent, An. Christi 697. in Spelman: Concil. Tom. 1. p. 195. Can. 10, 11. Si In VESPERA praecedente diem Solis POST QUAM SOL OCCUBUIT, aut in Vespera praecedente A [...]no 697. diem Lunae post oecusum solis fervus ex mandato Domini sui, opus aliquod servile egerit, Dominus factum 80. Solidis luito. Si servus hisce diebus itineraverit, Domino pendet 6 solidos, [...]ut flage [...]Jo caedatur. Si liber homo id faciat, tempore vetito, sit reus Collistrigii mulctae: & qui eum detulerit dimidium habeat, tam mulctae tam Wi [...]gildi By which Law it is most evident; that the Lords-day began and ended at Evening after Sun-set; and was to be sol [...]mnized from Evening to Evening, without doing any ser [...]i [...]e work on Sunday nights after sun set, as well as on Saturday nights, though the Lords-day then actually determined. To which I shall adde that of Venerable B [...]da our learned Countreyman, in his Homily on Matthew 28. verse 1. quoted by Bartholomaeus Brixienis in his Glosse upon Gratian Distinct. 75. In die ista (to wit, the Lords-day, NOCTES INCIPIUNT PRAECEDERE Anno 720. DIES, ideo fortè ut tres dies & noctes haberi possint, in quibus Domin [...]s fuit in ventro terrae, quod nec sic habetur nisi Synechdo [...]hicè, vel declaratur: quia Missa non decantatur in Sabbato, sed in principio sequentis noctis, & dicitur; Deus qui hanc SACRTISSIMAM NOCTEM, &c. & ita est die Dominica Nox illa. A Passage so plain for the Lords days beginning on saturday at Evening, that it needs no glosse, and this was the doctrine and practise of our Nation then.

My thirteenth Authority is the Synod of Franckford, [Page 51] under Charles the Great, famous for the Doctrine of Images therein condemned, the 22. Canon Anno 793. whereof (apud Achuini opera Col. 1893) resolves our question thus. Ut Dies Dominica à vespera usque ad vesperam servetur. A direct determination of the point in difference. That the Lords-day is to be kept from Evening to Evening.

My fourteenth probation, is the expresse decree of the Emperour Charls the Great himself, and Ludovicus Pius, Capit. I. 6. Tit. 186 apud Fredericum Lindebrogum Codex Legum Antiquarum p. [...]8. & apud Anno 80. Bochellum Decret. Ecclesiae Gallicanae I 4. Tit. 3. c. 39. p 589. A Vespera us (que) ad Vesperam Dies Dominicus servetur. What can be more full and punctually than this? Which is seconded Capit. I. 1. c 15. as a decree of the Council of Laodicea.

My fifteenth, is Concilium Foro-Julienne under the same Charls, c. 13. apud Suriū Tom. 3. p. 266. Diem autem Dominicum Inchoant. Noctis initio, id est, Vespere Sabbati Quae in prima lucescit Sabbati, Anno 800. quando signum insonuerit, vel Horaest ad Vespertinum celebrandum, non propter honorem Sabbati ultimi, sed propter sanctam illam Noctem p [...]imi Sabbati, id est, Domini [...]i Diei, cum omni reverentia & honorifica Religione Venerari omnibus mandamus. A Canon so apparent for beginning the Lords-day at Evening, that it needs no illustration.

My sixteenth, is the Synod of Towres under the same Charles Canon 40. apud Surium. Tom. 3 p. 227. Itemque interdicit ne mercata & placita Anno 806. usquam fiant die Dominica, quā oportet omnes christianos à servile opere in laude Dei & gratiarum actione, Usque ad Vesperam perseverare; which compared with the former Canons, is a direct proof, that the Lords-day begins at Evening, because then the celebration of it by this Canon, is to end.

My seventeenth is the Council of Mentz, Anno 813. recorded by Juo Caruotensis, Decretalium par [...] 4. c. 16. which decrees thus. Omnes Dies Dominicos à Vespera in Vesperam cum omni veneratione & observatione decrevimus observare, & ab illi [...]Jo opere abstinere, &c. A pregnant testimony in this point. Anno [...]13.

My eighteenth, is that of H Rabanus Maurus, [Page 52] Homil [...] de Dominicis diebus, in his works at large, Edit. 1616. Tom. 5. p. 605. where he thus resolves this question on my side. Observemus ergo diem Anno 840. Dominicam & sanctificemus illam sicut antiquis de sabbato praeceptum est, dicente Legislatore, A Vespera usque ad Vesperam celebrabitis sabbata vestra. Videamus ne otium nostrum vanum sit. Vespera Diei Sabbati, usque ad Vesperam Diei Dominici sequestrati à rurali opere & omni negotio, solo divino cultui vacemus. To whom I may add his Coetanian Haymo Halberstattensis, Homilia in die Paschatis p, 7, 8. who there resolves in punctually termes, that the Lords-day begins and ends at Evening, not at morning; and so ought to be solemnized from Evening to Evening.

My nineteenth, is the Councell of Compendium, apud Radulphum Tungrensem, de Canonum observantia, Propositio 15. Bibl. Patrum. Tom. 11. p. 445. F. Tom. 14. p.

242. & apud Alexandrum Alesium, Summa Theologiae pars 3. Quaest. 31. Artic. 2. p. 145. [...]60. Anno

Both these Authors being of the same judgement with this Councell, which decrees thus. Omnes Dies Dominicos à Vespera usque ad Vesperam omni v [...]neratione, devotione observari, &c. words most direct in point.

My twentieth, is the Authority of Amalarius Fortunatus, Bishop of Triers, who flourished about the year 920. De Ecclesiasticis officiis, lib. 1 c. 12. Bibl. Patrum Anno 920.

Tom. 9. pars 1. p. 311. F. Dominica Nox in magna gloria celebratur, ut liquet omnibus qui morem nostrae Eccl [...]siae [...]enent. Unde Augustinus ex Sermone ad Populum vigiliis Paschae. Deinde Sabbati Dies à sua nocte incip [...]jens, finitus est vespere incipienti [...] noctis: Quae pertinet ad imtium Diei Dominicae, quoniam Eam Dominus suae Resurrectionis gloria consecravit. Illius itaque Noctis ad in [...]itium Diei Dominicae pertinentis, nunc istam solenniter memoriam celebramus. What can be more plain to testifie, that both in the judgement and practise of that age the Lords-day did begin and end at Evening, and that Christ by his Resurrection consecrated this night for his service, not the Morning and day following it onely, excluding it.

My 21. is the Ecclesiasticall Laws of Edgar and Canuius, two ancient Kings of this Island, recorded [Page 53]

in Lambards Saxon Laws, and in Mr. Fox his book of Mart [...]rs, Edit. 1610. p. 715. & [...] Anno 96

Spelmanni Concilia p. 445, 446. who both enacted, 'That the Lords-day should be kept holy from Saturday Vespers at three of the clock till Monday morning; beginning

Bishop Alley mad [...] [...] 9. of the clock in his poore mans Library.

the solemnization of it on Saturday Evening at 3 of the clock, not at Midnight or morning following, and continuing it till Monday morning;' for preventing all prophanesse and disorders on our Sunday night, as being more fit to be spent in holy duties, than servile works, or pastimes; it being fitter to give God more time than he commands, than to rob him of the least minute. From these Kings raings, it was the constant custome of this Kingdome for Lab [...]u [...]ers, servants, & all others, to give over their week day works about Saturday Noon, or 3 of the clock, some space before Evening service, that so they might repair to Evening prayers that day, and after that begin the sanctification of the Lords-day at Evening, as is evident by the statutes of 4 H. 4. c. 14. 6 H. 6. c 3. and 23. H. 6. c. 13. which enact, 'That no Labourers whatsoever, should take any hire for the Festivall dayes, nor for the half dayes for the Evens of Feasts when they do not labour.' Which custome hath been observed in some places till of late (within the memory of such who exceed not 50 years) the Saturday being esteemed an half holy day, and servants recreating th [...]mselves upon it a little before night, that so they might avoid all Pastimes on the Lords-day, and keep it holy from Evening to Evening. Which (together with the custome of observing Holy-day Eves, because those dayes began at Evening) is a manifest and direct evidence, that the Church of England (till of late some taught the co [...]trar [...]) did begin the Lords-day on Saturday Evening, even from these Kings time, and long before; and therefore should proceed to do so now. The same Law was enacted by William King of Scots. Anno 1203, which was likewise ratified by a Scottish Council, as Hector Boetius lib. 13. de Scotis; & Centuriae Magdeburg. Cent. 13. Col. 932. lib. 48. & Col. 788. l. 40. accord. viz. That Sunday should be kept holy, from Saturday at 3 of the Clock, till Monday Evening; that none should do any worldly businesse thereon, but be employed onely in holy actions, and King Alexander the third of Scotland in a Parliament, An. 1314. decreed, That none should fish in the waters, from Saturday Vespers til Monday morning.

Anno 1203.

Page 54]

My 22. is the Decree of the Council of Lyons, concerning Holy dayes, recorded by Juo Carnotensis. Decretalium pars 4 c. 14 & Gratian de Consecratione Distinct. 3 fol 663. Pronunciandum est Laicis ut sciant tempora feriandi per annum, scilicet, Omnem Dominicam à Vespera usque ad Vesperam. Upon which Ba [...]tholomaeus Brixienensis. (on Gratian's Text) gives this Glosse: usque ad Vesperam. Hi [...] habes Quando incipiat Di [...]s secundum Canones; s [...]i [...]ic [...]t A VESPERA. Gratian, Juo, Panormitan, Hostiensis, with other Canonists being of the same judgement too. What can be more direct or [...]ositive than this?

Anno 1020.

The 23 Is Honorius Augustodunensis, de Imagine Mundi, lib. 2 c. 27. de initio & fine dierum, Bibl. Patrum Tom. 12. p 497. R. Christiani Diem Dominicam à Vespera usque in Vesperam finiunt.

Anno 1120.

My 24. Is the Synod under Simon and Galo the Legat, apud Bochellum, decret-Eccles. Gal. lib. 4. Tit. 7. c. 14. p 578. & Tit. 10. c. 12. p. 595. Pronunciandum est Laicis ut sciant tempora feriandi per annum id est, Omnem Dominicam, à Vespera usque ad Vesperam. Nec ali [...]uis à vespera Diei Sabbati, ad vesperam Diei Domin [...]cae ad molendina aquar [...]m, nec ad aliqua alia molere audeat. A ull resolution in this Controversie.

Anno 121
[...].

My 25. Is Pope Gregory the [...]i [...]th, Decretalium lib. 2. Tit. 9. de Feriis. c. 2 p 595. Who determines thus. Omnem Dominicam Vesperam à Vespera usque ad Vesperam [...]erandum Sanctam D [...]em Dominic [...]m Ab ho a Diei Sabbati Vespertina inchoandam. It ne [...]ds no Glosse being so di [...]ct

Anno 1273.

My 26. Is the Canon of the Synod of Angiers. Apud Bochellum Decret. Eccl [...]s. l. 4. Tit. 10. p. 14. p. 578. Inhibemus molitoribus etiam quibuseunque sub poena interminatione praedicta, & molendinarum Dominis, Nè ipsi

Diebus Dominicis, maximè à vespera Diei Sabbati, usque ad vesperam Diei Dominicae molendina molire faciant aut permittant, non obstante longi temporis abusu, qui [Page 55] non usus censendus aut consuetudo, imò verius corruptela, cum tanta sint graviora peceata, quanto diutius infoelicem animam detinuerant obligatam, cum aliqua praescriptio contra praecepta decalogi locum sibi vindicare non possit. A direct evidence.

Anno 1280.

My 27, is a domestick Provinciaall Constitution under Simon Isleep Archbishop of Canterbury recorded by Lindwood, Constit. Provincialium l. 2. Tit. de Feriis fol. 74. B. And by Joannis de Aton: fol. 148. a. Inprimis sacrum diem Dominicum ab hora vespertina Diei Sabbati inchoandum, which needs no other Glosse but Lindwoods, who thence concludes, That the Lords-day ever begins at Evening: the constant ancient Doctrine of our Church:

Anno 1320.

My 28. is an ancient English Dialogue upon the Commandements, intituled Dives & Pauper, first Printed Anno 1496, and after reprinted by Thomas Berthelet the Kings Printer, Anno 1536. . Which Book on the third (our fourth) Commandement ch. 14. f. 132. &c. 6. f. 11 [...] demanding this Question; How long ought the Holy day to be kept and hallowed? resolves it thus, From Even to Even; as Raymundus, saith, and the Law. (Extrau. l. 5. Tit. de Feriis. Omnes dies) We have ordained that all Sundayes be kept with all manner of worship, From Even to Even; and holy Writ saith also, and God himself: From Even to Even shall you celebrate the Sabbaths.

Anno 1496.

My 29. is an old English Treatise intituled, The Flower of the Commandements of God, Printed at London, by Wynkin de Ward, Anno 1521. ch. 3. on the third (our fourth) Commandement, f. 31. 32. Which thus determines. Nothing is to be done on the Sunday, but to be besied towards God, him for to Honour. Question, Who so should demand, At what houre a man should begin to celebrate the Feasts. The Answer, Regularly, men say, that from the one Evenson unto the other Evenson the Chyrk make solemnity. It is written Extrau. de Feriis, & de consecratione distinct. 1. cap. Missas; Omnes dies Dominicos à vespera in vesperam decernimus observari. In like wise, saith the Scripture, in many places. à vespera ad vesperam celebrabitis Sabbata vestra. This scripture reproveth the fully of some simple men, the [Page 56] which reputeth not to be sin to labour and work late on the Saturday at night, and ween that it is sin, to work onely on the Monday in the Morning. These two last authorities I h [...]v [...] cited at large, because they are punctuall, the books unknown to most; and [...]jully manifest the Doctrine and practise of the Church of England in that and sormer ages, to be fully consonant to my opi [...]ion; though now out of ignorance of Antiquity, r [...]puted a strange, unheard of Novel [...]y, by [...]ome who repute themselves no mean Rabbies, and scorn the Title of Ignoramus, wherewith they upbraid all Lawyers, though more knowing, more learned, than many of themselves.

Anno 1521.

30. To these I could h [...]ve added sundry others; but to avoid prolixity, I shall onely remember the names and works of some late Authors, from Anno 1100. till this present, who expressly resolve. That the Lords-day begins and concludes at Evening. N [...] to mention Juo Carnoten-Gratian, Alexander A [...]

From
Anno 1
[...]00. to 1620.

A [...]Jensis, Radulphus T [...]*ngrensis, Barthol [...]*mae-Brixiensis, Joannis de Thiery, Antonius de Brutio, Gulielmus Lindwood, Joannis de Aton, Laurentius Surius, or Laurentius Bechellus, who all concur in this opinion in their f [...]re-named works, where the precedent Canons and Decrees are registred; I shall onely refer you to Thomas Aquinas in 3. Sentent. Distinct. 37. Art. 5. Distinct. 11. qu. 2.

Art. 2. qu. 3. ad 2^m 2^a s [...]cundae. qu. 122. art. 4. Tostatus Abulensis in in Exod. c. 20. qu. 12. Hostiensis sum. l. 2. Tit. de Feriis sol. 142. Joannis de Burgo (Chanceillour of Cambridge in Henry [...]he sixth his reign) Pupilla oculip [...]*rs 9. c. 6. de Feriis B. E. Baptista Trouomala in his Summa Rosella Tit. Feriae. sect 4, 5. Angelus de Clavasio, in his Summa Angelica, Tit. Dies sect. 1. Cavarruvius l. 4. c. 13. Tom. 2. with all other Canonists in the titles De Feriis, & Diehus Festis, who all resolve in these very p [...]si [...]ve terms. Abstinentum est ab op [...]*ribus omni die Dominica. Ab Hora D [...]ei Sab [...]ti vespertina inchoando, non ipsam Ho [...]*jam praeveniando. Quod feriation [...]*m diet Sabbati tenere d [...]*bemus, à vespera ad v [...]*speram, sci [...]*Jicet ab ultima parte diei praecedentia vigiliae, Quod dies quoad celebration [...]*m divinaerum consideratur de vespera in vesperam: and That the whole day is to be [Page 57] wholly dedicated to God, and spent in his Service and Worship. Which resolution is likewise seconded by Fridericus Lindebrogus in his Glossarium: in Cod: Legum Antiquarum. Tit. Dominicus dies, by learned Hospinian de origine Festorum. fol. 31. 68, 69, 70. 161, 162. by Mr. Sprint in his Treatise of the Sabbath, with sundry others:

Wherefore I shall close up these authorities with that of Jacobus de Graffiis, Decisionum aurearum casuum Conscientiae, Pars 2. lib. 2. c. 13. De Diebus Festis, sect. 8. 9, 10. p. 136, 137. Qua ad feriationem INCIPIT DIES VESPERA PRAECEDENTI, ET FINITUR IN SEQUENTI VESPERA, &c. Igitur SECUNDUM

See Histrio-mastix p.
643, 644.
and the Table.

SCRIPTURAM ET ECCLESIAM FESTUM INCIPIT IMMEDIATE POST OCCASUM SOLIS DIEI PRAECEDENTIS USQUE AD OCCASUM SOLIS DIEI FESTI. Igitur ex his colligitur, QUOD NULLA CONSUETUDO POTEST EXCUSARE LABORANTES SABBATO POST OCCASUM, vel in praecipuis solemnitatibus, CUM FIAT CONTRA JUS DIVINUM. For which he quotes Pisanus, verbo Feriae, as concurring with him. From all which expresse concurring authorities (which none ever contradicted before Wolphius, for ought that can be proved) to which I might subjoin the opinions and practise of Mr. Cotton, Mr. Hooker, with sundry other Ministers and Churches in New England; I hope I may safely conclude; That the Church and people of God, together with the Fathers, Councils, and learned of all ages, from the very first institution of the Lords day, to this present, have constanly resolved, both by their Writings and practise too, that the Lords-day doth, and ought of right to begin and end at Evening; not at Morning or Midnight, and that all former ag [...]s have thus constantly solemnized it; as all these severall Testimonies clearly manifest, beyond all contradiction or dispute.

I have now (I hope) by all the premises sufficiently proved the truth of this Posi [...]ion; That the Sabbath and Lords-day doth and ought of right to begin and end at Evening, not at Morning or Midnight; and manifested it to be the resolved [Page 58] Doctrine and constant practise of all fotmer age. There is nothing now remaining but that I should answer those Pretences or Ojections, which are or may be made against it; and take off one Cavill which may be made against some of the premises: when this is dispatched, the truth will be most perspicuous, so that none can further doubt or question it, (as I suppose) for the future.

The Arguments produced for the proof of the adverse opinions, (or rather onely for one of them, to wit, that the Lords-day begins and ends at morning) are six; which I shall answer in order.

The first of them is this. That what the Law of nature settled for a time, to wit, that the Sabbath and other dayes should begin at Evening, that Christs Resurrection, a part of his Redemption, hath now changed to the morning; the work of redemption being far more excellent than the work of Creation. Which if we reduce to a Logically Argument is but this. Christs Resurrection a part of his Redemption, is more excellent than the work of Creation, Ergo it changed the beginning of the Lords day, and by consequence of all other dayes, from Evening to Morning.

To which I answer, 1. It is very dangerous, unsafe for any Mortalls to make comparison between the glorious works, actions, attributes, and ordinances of Almighty God, and to prefer one of them so highly before the other (as many do) without an expresse warrant from God himself in his word, which hath been the cause of many grosse errors and practises amongst Christians. I grant the work of Christs Redemption is a most glorious work, and signal testimony of Gods transcendent love to the world of Gods elect and redeemed ones, John 3. 16. Rom. 5. 8. Ephes. 2. 4, 5. c. 5. 2. 25. 2 Thes. 2. 16. Rev. 1. 5. But was not his creating of us, in holynesse and righteousness after his own image and likeness, as transcendent an act of love as this? Gen. 1. 26, 27. Psal. [Page 59] 8. No doubt it is.

2. That no Scripture, (to my best observation) prefers or advanceth the work of Redemption (much lesse our Saviours Resurrection from the dead on the first day; being but one part or branch thereof)

Objection
1.

See Wolphius, Chronolog.
I. 2. c. 1.
Dr. Bound
of the Sabbath, I.
2 p. [...]
with others

Hene [...]
Aquinas prima se-cundae.
Quaest.
100. Artic.
5. ad s [...]cun.
concludes, Inter omnia benefi. cia Dei commemoranda

before the work of Creation; both these works being very great and glorious in themselves: wherefore I cannot believe the work of Redemption, or Christs Resurrection alone, to be more excellent and glorious than the work of Creation, without sufficient Texts, and Scripture grounds to prove it; but may deny it as a presumptuous fancy or unsound assertion, till satisfactorily proved, as well as peremptorily averred without proof.

3. If such comparisons may be admitted, or made without presumption, in my apprehension, Gen. 1. and 2. compared with Psalm 8. Psal. 104. Psal. 19. 1. 2, 9. Psal. 95. 6, 7. Psal. 100. 1, 2, 3, 4. Psalm 148. Job 36. and 39. Eccles. 12. 1. 1. Isa. 37. 16. c. 40. 28. c. 43. 1. c. 44. 4. c. 45. 12. 18. c. 51. 13. Jer. 10. 11, 12. c. 14. 22. c. 27. 5. c. 32. 17, 18, 19. c. 51. 15, 16. Jonah 1. 9. John 1. 3. 10. Acts 2. 24. c. 14, 15. c. 17. 24, 25, 26. Rom. 1. 19, 20. Col. 1. 16, 17, 18. Heb. 1. 1, 2. 1 Pet. 4. 19. Rev. 4. 11. cap. 10, 6. and the fourth Commandment it self, Exod. 20. 8, to 12. seem to prefer the work of Creation before the work of Redemption, as most of all manifesting, declaring, magnifying the infinite power, wisdom, greatnesse, glory, majesty, providence, bounty, sovereignty, Deity of God; and as the strongest motive and obligation to all his Creatures (and redeemed Saints likewise) to adore, worship, love, fear, serve, reverence, obey God as their Creator, and to depend, rest, trust, commit themselves to him alone.

4. These reasons seem to advance the work of Creation before the work of Redemption.

First, it is the First and most ancient of all Gods visible works, Gen. 1. 1. Deut. 4. 32. Mark 13. 19. Rev. 3. 14. 2 Pet. 3. 4. far antienter than Christs Resurrection or work of Redemption. And that which is Antientest, is usually best and honourablest, Psal. 77. 5. Isa. 3. 2. c. 9. 15. c. 44. 7. c. 24. 23. c. 51. 19. Jer. 18. 15. Dan. 7. 9. 13. 22. John 1. 2, 3. 1 Kings 12. 6. Jer. 6. 16. Acts 22. 16. 1 Joh. 2. 7. Rev. 3: 14.

Secondly, the work of Creation is the very greatest of all Gods works, and more universall, generall, extensive than the work of Redemption: extending to all the Glorious angels, Sun, Moon, Starres, Heavens, Aire, Earth, Sea, with all the severall creatures in them; whatsoever and to all mankind. Gen. 1. and 2. Psalm 83. Psalm 104. Psalm 148. 4. 5, 6. Isa. 40. 26. c. 42. 5 c. 45. 12, 18. John 1. 3. Ephes. 3. 9. Col. 1. 14. Rev. 4. 11. c. 10. 6. yea, to Jesus Christ himself, stiled; the beginning of the Creation of God. Rev. 3. 14. Therefore, more excellent, greater, glorious than the work of

PRIMUM ET PRAECIPUUM EST BENEFICIUM CREATIONIS, quod commemeratur in sanctificatione Sabbati, unde Exod. 20
11. PRO
RATIONE QUARTI PRAECEPTI PONITUR: with which [3 Synod Parisiensis, Anno 1557. apud Boshellum, Decret.
Eccles.
Gall. p.
589. concurres,
and Chrysostome Hom. 4.
super Mat-thaeum.

[Page 60]

Sabbatum inter caetera Festa tantum praescribitur in D [...].calogo quia figurabat GE-

Redemption, peculiar onely to Gods elect, the smallest part of men; not universall to all Mankind; much lesse to Angels, and all other Creatures: Now it is a received Maxime in Divinity, Morality, Policy, Reason; Bonum quo communius, eo melius. See Psalm 145. 9, 10, 14, 15, 16. whence Philo the Jew, de Opificio Mundi, stiles the Sabbath in memory of it; Festum non unius populi Regionisve, sed in universum omnium: quae sola digna est ut dieatur Popularis Festivitas.

Thirdly, God himself created all things at fi [...]st, very good, perfect, pure, excellent; and man himself after his own image, in Holinesse, true Righteousnesse, Integrity, [...]erfection, without Sinne, Corruption, Imperfection or obliquity, Gen. 1. 18. 25. to the end. c. 5. 1. c. 9. 6. Eccles. 7. 27. 1 Cor. 11. 7. Ephef. 4. 24. Col. 3. 10. Man being depraved, corrupted by Adams sin and fall, which brought a curse upon Mankind and all other creatures too: Christs Redemption, though it hath freed all his Elected, called, justified, sanctified ones from Hell, death and damnation, the condemning, ruling power of sin, and curse of the Law; y [...]t it hath not redeemed them (much lesse the generality of mankind and other Creatures) from the pollution, corruption of Sinne, I [...]st and [...]ll those temporall miseries, curses, plagues, Judgements, imperfections in this life, which sinne hath brought upon them: nor yet restored them to such a glorious, happy, perfect condition here, as that wherin man was first created: the best of Saints on earth, having many remainders of sinne, corruptions, defects and infirmities in them till they come to heaven, 1 Kings 8. 46. Eccles. 7. 20. Rom. 7. 7. to the end, James 3. 2. 1 John 1. 8, 10. c. 2. 1. 2. Therefore in this respect, the work of Creation excells that of Redemption, in relation to all the creatures corrupted, vitiated by mans fall, and of the redeemed themselves, whiles they continue on earth, and have cause to celebrate Sabbaths and Lords-Dayes, to sanctifie and make them holier.

4. Some of the creatures, as the Angels, Christ himself, as man and a creature, (if Page 61) not the Sun, Moon, Stars, heavens) the works of Gods creation; are more excellent and glorious than man, or any Saints on earth, the [...]ubject of Christs Redemption, Psalm 8. Heb. 1. Rev. 3. 14. 2 Thess. 1. 7. Psalm 103. 20. Mat. 25. 31. Heb. 2. 7, 9. c. 12. 22. Rev. 14. 10. Luke 20. 36. compared together. Therefore the work of Creation is more excellent than that of Redemption.

NERALIA
BENEFICIA DEI scilicet, CREATIO-NIS & beatitudinis, Aquinas
prima se-cundae
quaest.
100. Artic.
5. secund.
Qu. 102.
Art. 4. 10^m secunda secundae qu. Artic 4.
ad 2^m Alensis Sum.
Theol.
Tom. 3.
qu. 32. m.
1, 2. 3 Bernardinus Senensis
Sum. 10.
Artic. 1. c.
1. 2. Bona-ventura & Media villa. in l. 3.
Sent. Dist.
37.

Ephef. 1.
4. [...]0. 15.
Col. 1, 2,
14 Rev. 5.
9. 1 Pet 1.
2. 19. Heb.
2. 16. Jude
6.

Gen. 3. 17,
18. 19.
Levit. 26.
14. to 40.
Deut. 28.
14. to 68.
Psal. 107.
33, 34.
Mal. 3. 9.
11. c. 2. 2.

Fifthly, without the work of Creation, there could be no work of redemption; the chief end whereof is to restore us to that felicity, Happinesse in the enjoyment of God and his creatures, which man in his innocency, (had h [...] p [...]rsevered in that estate) should have enjoyed by the work of creation. Therefore the work of Creation is at least as excellent as glorious, as the work of redemption, if not more eminent than it.

Rom. 8.
19. 20. 21, 22.

See Philo Judaeus de op sicio mundi.

Sixthly, the excellency and glory of the work of redemption consists principally in this, that it was wrought by Jesus Christ himself, the onely beloved Sonne of God Luke 1. 6. 8. 99. Rev. 3. 24. Gal. 3. 17 Col. 1. 14. Heb. 9. 12 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19. Rev. 5. 9. But this cannot advance it above the work of creation; God created all things by Jesus Christ (as well as redeemed his elect) Ephes. 3. 9. Col. 1. 16. and that onely as he was God, and the word, Heb. 1. 2. John 1. 1 2, 3. Gen. 1. 1, 3, 26. not as God and man.

Seventhly all accord, that it is a work of greater excellency, omni [...]ot [...]n [...]y, power, love, to create and make all things out of nothing, then to repair, restore, rectifie things already created when deprav [...]d, defiled, cap [...]vated or impaired. See Basil and Amb [...]ose in their Hexamers, most Commentators on Gen. 1. and Isa. 45. 5. to 20. c. 40. 48. Re. 4. 11. Acts 17. 24. Heb. 3. 4. Therefore I may safer conclud [...], that the work of Creation is greater and more [Page 62] excellent than the work of Redemption, from these Texts and Reasons; then my Antagonists averre the work of Redemption to transcend the work of Creation in excellency and greatnesse, without Scriptures or solid reasons grounded on it.

Magis
praecipitur observatio Sabbati
quam al [...]arum sol [...]mnitatum, quia b [...]neficium Creationis in hoc commemora [...]jur.

5. Admit the whole work of Redemption wrought by Christ, to be better, greater, excellenter than the work of Creation: Yet none can prove or demonstrate, that Chrstsi Resurrection (one part onely of his work of redemption, on the first day of the week) is greater than the whole work of Creation. Therefore they cannot conclude from it alone, that this his bare Resurrection should alter the beginning, end, limits, nature of times, and dayes, settled by God at the very Creation; as they here argue.

QVOD EST PRAECIPI-UM INTER PRAE [...]ERITA Angelus de Clavasio. in summa Argelica.
Tit. P [...]aecep [...]um sest. 6.
[...] 194.

6. Admit Chrsts Resurrection and work of Redemption, to be greater, better, excellenter than Gods work of Creation, (which I deny) will it thence follow; Ergo, it altered the work of Creation; the cause of Sunne, Moon, Starres, Dayes, weeks, years; the beginning and end of the Sabbath, or first day of the week, and by consequence of all other dayes and times settled by God himself at the Creation by an unalterable Law? Gen. 1. 5. 8. to 20. 23. 21. c.

See Zanchius
de operibus

2. 2, 3. Exod. 20. 8. to 12. Psalm 148. 5. 6. Eccl. Creationis
3. 14. Jer. 31. 35, 36. c. 33. 20, 21. 2 Pe. 3. 14. lib.

Certainly all these Texts wi [...] others forecited, resolve, and experience proves the contrary, the dayes, weeks, months, morning, Evening, course of Sunne, Moon, and Starres, being still the same they were from the Creation till this present; and every thing or action that is greater, better than another, not abrogating or altering their course or limits which God or men had formerly settled.

7. The ends of Christs Resurrection and Redemption were meerly spirituall, to redeem, justifie, raise up from sinne, from the dead, and avance to heaven at last, all those whom Christ redeemed, John 5. 29. c. 11. 25. Rom. 1. 4. Rom. 5. 5. to 16. 1
Cor. 15. throughout, Phil. 3. 10. 11. 1 Pet. 1. 1. 3 c. 21. Rev. 20.
5. 6. Rom. 4. 24, 25. c. 8. 11. 2 Cor. 4. 14. Ephes. [Page 63]
2. 6. Not to alter the beginning or ending of dayes, times, •seasons: not one of all these Texts (nor any other speaking of Christs Resurrection, and the ends or benefits thereof) ass [...]rtin [...], importing, much lesse resolving any thing: Therefore it did not, could not alter the beginning or limits of the fi [...]st day, [...]i [...]her as a naturall, or as his Resurrection day, as these Writers averre.

8. Christs Pa [...]sion, bloodshed, was the principall part of his Redemption, yea his Nativity, Ascention (to omit his whole life on earth, and perpetuall mediation in heaven for us) were parts thereof; the one the first part, the other th [...] last of all: B [...]t it is clear that our Saviours Passion and bloodshed in the Evening, (though it were the chief [...]st part of his Redemption) made no alteration in the b [...]gining or end of dayes, so as to change the beginning of Goodfriday f [...]om Evening before, to three of the clock in the afternoon; that his Nativity (about Midnight) or his Ascention (about Noon or eleven of the clock in the morning, as is most probable) did not translite the beginning of those dayes, or any other, to Midnight, Noon, or Morning, though they were the first and last parts of of his work of Redemption; why then should his Resurrection onely in the Morning (a lesse principall part of his work, than his Passion, or perchance than his Nativity or Ascention; the one of which preceded the other followed his Resurrection) make such a change in dayes beginnings, when neither of these three other did so? If it be, because it was a part of Christs Redemption. So were the other three, and yet they produced no such mutation; and why a part of Christs Redemption should cause such an alteration, onely because it is a part: or why one inferior part of it alone, should do it, and not the chiefest; why the intermediate, not the first, or last part of it, transcends my apprehension. If it be because God ordained it should effect such a transmutation, then shew me expresse Scripture for it, (as none can do) or else reject it for a groundlesse fancy, as in truth it is, But more of this [Page 64] in the Answer to the next Objection.

Isa. 53.
throughout.
Rom. 3 25.
c 3. 9. c. 4.
25. Eph. 1.
5. c. 2. 13.
col. 1. 20, 21, 22 Heb
9 7. to 26.
c. 10. 10 c.
12. 24 c.
13 c. 13.
11, 12. 1
Pet. 1. 2, 18 19.
John 17.
Rom. 5. 9.

The second Objection is this, Christs Resurrection on the first day of the week in the morning, did actually change the beginning of the day from Evening to morning, and constitute the Lords-day to begin at morning. Therefore it ought to begin at morning. If we c [...]st this into a sormall Argument, it will be more perspicuous. Christs Resurrection, the cause of the Lords-day, was not till the morning, Ergo the Lords-day must not begin till morning, because the effect must needs be with or subsequent to the cause, and cannot precede it; whereas the effect should over-reach [...]e cause in point of time, if the Lords-day should begin at Evening, Christs Resurrection beginning not till the morning. This reason and argument is the main foundation whereon the Opposites build their errour; wherefore I shall be more copious in discovering the sandinesse, falshood, and fallaciousnesse of it.

Objection 2.

First therefore, I answer, that this whole Argument, is but a chain of severall grosse falshoods and mistakes, contrary to the Scriptures: I wonder therefore why so many grave, judicious men should be ensnared by it.

Answer 1.

1. The first of them (the ground work of all the rest, and of this error concerning the Lords-day beginning at morning is this, That Christs Resurrection did alter the beginning of that first day of the week, whereon he arose, from Evening to Morning: which I have manifested to be an apparent Error contrary to the Scriptures; which testifie that that day began at Evening, and that Christs Resurrection did nothing alter it; as the third and fifth preceding Conclusions prove at large. Wherefore I shall here demand of the Objectors, how it appears that Christs Resurrection made such a change as they pretend? If by Scripture, shew one Text, that necessarily proves it: this I am sure they cannot do. If not by Scripture: then it is a meere groundlesse conceit of their own forging. Yea, but though they want Scripture, yet they have this sound reason to prove it: Christ rose again upon the first morning; therefore [Page 65] he translated the beginning of it from Evenig to morning. To which I reply, that this main Capitall reason is but a grosse in consequent, and a circular Argumentation; For if the Argument be denied, as justly it may be; then they prove it by that very medium which was next before denied, and they ought to make good; that Christs Resurrection did chan [...]e the day from morning to Evening (there being no other medium but this to confirm it) therefore if he rose again upon it in the morning, he made such a change as they pretend. So that this their reason is but Idem per Idem, a Petitio principii a Circular dispute, a grosse Non sequitur, and so to be rejected as false and idle. But yet a little more to lay open the falshood of this Proposition; That Chists Resurrection made such an alteration of that first dayes beginning (which hath neither Scripture nor Reason to back it.)

I would first demand this Question of them. Why Christs Resurrection should produce such a Change, when as his Nativity, Passion and Ascention, (parts of his Redemption too, as beneficiall to Christians as his Resurrection) had no such effect?

2. How they come to know, that such a Change was de Facto made, when no Scripture rev [...]als or intimates it?

3. How was it possible for Christs Resurrection to call back and adnul that beginning of the day, which was irrevocably past, and gone before it happened? since by their own Rule, the effect cannot precede the cause; and so by the same Reason, Christs Resurrection in the morning could not operate à parte ante, to change the beginning of that day, which was actually past at Evening.

4. Where they did [...]ver read, that occasions happening upon any dayes, did alter or bound on [...] the beginning and end of dayes? the dayes ever bounding out the occasions (which we say happened upon such a day and houre) not the occasions the dayes?

5. How Christs Resurrection could change this dayes beginning, when as it altered not its name, nature or order, [...] [Page 64] [...] (it being still the first day of the [Page 66] [Page 65] week, as it was at the Creation, the week remaining yet the same) and seeing it made no change in the course of the Sun, and Moon, of day, and night, which rule bound out, and make up the naturall day?

6. How that which hath no limits of its own, but that which it had from the day on which it happened, (the first dayes morning being that which limited the Resurrection in point of time, and reduced it to a certainty) can possibly put bounds of time unto the day, which bounds outit? If they cannot resolve all these, Queries they must then disclaim this main fundamentall Conclusion, upon which they build their false grounded Error, as I have formerly proved. This is the first falshood.

The second is this, That Christs Resurrection was the cause of the Lords-day. This I say, is both a falshood and a fallacy. To make it more evidently so, we must consider the Lords-day, either as a naturall day, consisting of 24 houres, measured out by the Sunne or primum mrbile, and made up of the night and artificiall day: or as a Lords-day; that is, a day devoted and sequestred unto Gods immediate worship. If we consider it materially, or m [...]erly as a day, it is clear, that Christs Resurrection was no cause of the first day; for that was instituted by God at the Creation, Gen. 1. 5. who then appointed the Sunne, Moon, and Starres, to rule, limit, govern both the day and night, and to be the sole causes of them, Gen. 1. 14. to 22. Psal 74. 16, 17. Psal 136. 6, 7, 8. Psal. 104. 19. Jer. 31. 35, 36. c. 33. 20. Neither could Christs Resurrection be the cause of that day on which he arose; for it was begun before he rose again; and it had been and continued a day, though he had never risen on it; therefore it was no cause of it as a day. Besides, all time is the measure of motion, and so the motion of the Primum mobile the alone cause of it, and of this day too. Christs Resurrection theretofore being no cause of the Lords-day, as a day, could not alter the beginning of it in such manner as is prtended; since the Lords-day hath no bounds or limits, beginning or [Page 67] end, neither is it properly a part of time, but onely as it is a day, not as a Lords-day. Wherefore when you affirm that Christs Resurrection was the cause of the Lords-day, & therefore it changed the beginning of it; your meaning is and must be, that it was the cause of it, and that it changed the beginning thereof, as it was a naturall day (the change here r [...] [...]ing onely to the time and limits of the day, not simply to the quality, as it is a Lords-day, it having no limits at all, as it is a Lords day, but meerly as it is a naturall day;) which is a grosse untruth as I have proved, yea a fallacy too, in applying that to this day, as a day, which is spoken onely and intended of it, meerly as a Lords-day. To illustrate this by an example. The first day of the week, is like to water in Baptisme, to Bread and Wine in the Sacrament, to a Church that is consecrated, or to one about to enter into Orders: Now as we use to say, th [...]t Baptisme doth change the water, the Sacramentall consecration the bread and wine, Consecration Canonically the Church, and ordination the man; if we mean they change their very nature, essence and substance, the speech is meerly false; for they continue in nature, in substance, the same they were before; if we intend they onely alter their use, which is true; and yet apply this alteration to the substance (as the Papists do in case of the Sacrament, arguing thus; the Fathers say, that the Bread and Wine are changed after Consecration, to wit, in their use onely; Ergo they are transubstantiated and changed in th [...]ir substance;) then it is but a fallacy or equivocation which being explained proves but a meere Non sequitur, since the change in the use or quality onely, infers no necessary alteration in the Substance. So when the Objectors say, that Christs Resurrection did change the first day of the week; if they mean onely that it was the occasion why the use of it was altered from a common day to an holy day: or when they affirm, that Christs Resurrection was the cause of the Lords day, that is, the cause why the first day was and is solemnized as a Lords-day: their words are true in this sense onely; but then they neither prove nor imply any change at all in the limits, beginning or end of the first day, or in the day it self, but in its use alone; and so the day continues the same in all these respects, as it was before. But when they go thus far, as to prove that Christs Resurrection on it did alter the very beginning and end, (and so the nature and limits) of the day, because it was the occasion of altering its use (which is the thing they intend in both these Propositions) then the Argumentation is sophisticall, and the Conclusion this grosse inconsequent; Christs Resurrection was the cause of turning the first day of the week into the Lords-day; Ergo, it translated the beginning of that day from morning to Evening. An Argument so absurd, that the Objectors may now do well to blush at it. Again, if we consider this day onely, as it is a Lords-day, (that is, as a time consecrated to Gods publick worship) if the Objectors intend by this Proposition (Christs Resurrection in the morning was the cause of the Lords-day) that is, it did actually consecrate that very first day, whereon he arose, and all others

[Page 68]

Christs Resurrection is no more the cause of the Lords-day as a day; then Baptisme is [...] cause of the Sacramentall Bread and wine the cause of th [...]m as they are bread and wine; or the Ordination of Ministers, the cause of them as they are men.

succeeding it, for a Lords-day, even that very morning on which he arose again, as in truth they do; then I say it seems to me an apparent untruth. For though it be true that his Resurrection on that day, was one generall originall occasion of solemnizing it for the Lords-day; yet it is untrue that his bare Resurrection onely was the immediate efficient, constitutive cause of sanctifying it for a Sabbath or Lords-day; or that it did sanctifie that very day on which Christ arose for a Sabbath or Lords-day, even at that very time of the morning when he arose.

For first, Gods resting from his work of Creation on the seventh day, is paralell in reason with Christs Resurrection on the first day, in point of constituting either of them for a Sabbath or Holy day, as all acknowledge. But Gods resting on the seventh day, was onely the originall impulsive, not the immediate efficient, constitutive cause of the seventh day Sabbath; for it was not a Sabbath as soon as God began to rest, or only [Page 69] because he rested on it; but because he blessed and consecrated it for a Sabbath, and commanded Adam and his posterity to sanctifie it for a Sabbath, as is clear by Gen 2. 2, 3. Exod. 20. 7. to 12. for he sanctified it for a Sabbath because he had rested on it: so that his rest was onely the occasion why this d [...]y was consecrated for a Sabbath, rather than any of the other six; but that which made it a Sabbath, was Gods peculiar blessing, consecration, and institution of it for a Sabbath. So Gods passing over the Is [...]aelites, and slaving the Egyptians, was the occasion why the 14. day of the first Moneth was solemnized [...]or a Pass [...]ov [...]r-day: but that which constituted it to be such a day, was not his passing over the Israelites, but his expresse command to them to observe it throughout all their generations. Ex [...]d. 12 4. to 40. The Jews deliverance from Haman and th [...]i [...] other Enemies, was the cause or reason, why they annually observed the fourteenth and fifteenth dayes of the Moneth Adar, as solemn Festivals; and the deliverance from the Gunpowder-Treason, the occasion why we observe the fifth of November, as an annuall Festivall (which Feast we generally begin at Evening, since we then usually begin to ring our bells in memory of our deliverance the morning following) but the imm [...]diate efficient constituting cause of these dayes for Holy-dayes, was neither the Jews deliverance nor ours; but the Law and ordinance of the Jews, Esth. 9. 20 to 29. and the Sta [...]ute of 3 Jac [...]bi [...]c. 1. which ordained those dayes to be solemnized and kept holy. So it is in all other dayes solemnities whatsoever, not the occasion of their celebration, but the authority and command to sanctifie them, is that which constitutes them Holy-dayes; therefore by the self same reason, Christs bare Resurrection was onely the occasion why the Lords-day was afterwards sanctified and observed; but that which constituted and made it a Lords-day or Christian Sabbath, was some Precept or Ordinance of Christ, or his Apostles, or of the Primitive Church, without which it had not been actually a Lords-day or Sabbath in point of sanctification, though Christ did rise upon it.

Esth. 9. 20, 21, &c.

See 3 Jac. c. 1

See 5, & 6. E [...]. 6 c. 3. All Lawes and Canons touching Lords-days, Holy-dayes,

2. If Christs bare Resurrection [Page 70] without more Ceremony, did actually consecrate that very first day on which he arose, and all others for a Sabbath or Lords-day, what need then those many large Discourses of Divines, concernning the time when, the persons by whom, or the Authority by which the Sabbath was translated from the seventh day to the first, or this instituted sor a Lords-day?

Certainly if the very Resurrection of Christ did actually perform all this, that very morning on which he arose, all these disputes were at an end.

But few or none have been so absurd as to make Christs bare Resurrection the immediate constituting cause of the first day for a Sabbath or Lords-day, much lesse of that very day upon which Christ arose, which all the Evangelists stile, the First day of the week, Even as it was Christs Resurrection day; which shews, that it was not then actually constituted for a Sabbath or Lords-day, but continued an ordinary week-day, as before. Therefore it is not probable that it made [...]uch a change or consecration of that very day.

Feastdayes,
and Thanksgiving dayes,
and the Canonists
Tit Feri
[...], & dies F [...]sti.

See Mat.
28. 1. Mak
16. 2, 9.
Luk. 29. 1.
Joh. 20. 1.
19.

3. None of the Evangelists in their Histories of Christs Resurrection, make mention either in direct terms, or by way of necessary inference, that our Saviours bare Resurrection consecrated that very first day whereon he arose, or any succeeding it, for a Sabbath or Lords-day; much lesse that it changed the beginning thereof from morning to Evening. Therefore certainly no such alteration as is su [...]mised, was actually effected by it.

4. Had Christs Resurrection actually constituted that day on which he arose, and all other fi [...]st dayes ensuing for a Sabbath or Lords day, without further Ceremony, even on that day when he arose; then that day had been consecrated for a Sabbath or Lords-day, and the seventh day Sabbath hadbeen translated to it, before any man did or could take notice o [...] this alteration; before any knew this day was instituted for a Sabbath or [...]ords-day; yea, before it was known or believed that Christ was risen again, to or by his Disciples. For the Scripture is expresse, that he appeared not unto them till towards the Evening of that day;

at which time Thomas was absent, [Page 71]

and some of them doubted, whether he were risen again, or whether it was he or no: so that it is certain, they observed not that first day, as a Sabbath or Lords-day, in memory of his Resurrection, But it is altogether improbable, that Christ would consecrate that day for a Sabbath or Lords-day, before his Disciples or any other knew of it; or that he would make an alteration of the Sabbath, (which so much concerned the Apostles and Church) in private, without their presence or p

[...]ivity: o [...] that he would consec [...]ate that day for a Sabbath or Lords-day, in memory of his Resurrection, before it was certainly known that he was risen; or before he had shewed himself to his Disciples after he was risen; or before any did

Mat. 28.
17. Ma [...].
16 11, 13
14. Luk 24.
21, 22, 25,
26. 37. to
41. John 20, 19, 24,
25. 26. 1
Cor. 15. 4.
to 9.

know it to be a Lords-day or Sabbath it being made so only for man, Mar. 2. 27. not for Christ himself, or Angels, who were onely present with him when he arose. For Christ being onely wise, did all things in the fittest season, and in a publick manner, in the presence of his disciples, who were to be witnesses of all his actions, speeches, Acts 1. 2, 3 c. 2. 32. c. 10. 40, 41, 42, 43. 1 John [...], 1, 3. 2 Pet. 1. 16, 17, 18. Luke 1. 2. Therefore he would not, he did not institute that very day whereon he arose for a Sabbath or Lords-day, at the time when he arose, which the Evangelists certainly would have mentioned (being a matter of such moment to the Church and Christians) had it been done in truth, as pretended onely, but not proved, neither in truth can be. If therefore the Objectors affirm; that Christs Resurrection was the cause of the Lords-day as a Lords-day; that is, an immediate constituting cause of it, and that at the very moment when he arose, then it is a palpable untruth, as the premises manifest: If they mean by cause, onely the impulsive cause or originall occasion of its future consecration or institution for a Sabbath or Lords-day, then their Argument is but this. Christs Resurrection (the occasion of Christians solemnizing the Lords-day, as a Lords-day or Sabbath) was in the morning; Ergo the Lords-day must being at morning: which is but a meere Non sequitur; [Page 72] because the occasions of sanctifying any dayes for Sabbaths or Holy-dayes, do not bound out the beginning or end of the dayes, for then these days must begin and conclude when the occasi [...].ns of their solemnization do; But on the contrary, t [...]e dayes do ever limit the occasions and F [...]stivalls, which must begin and end with the dayes to which they are confined. This I shall make mani [...]est by examples, and make good by unanswerable reasons. For Examples, we have all the Festivalls in Scripture, which together with their occasions, are restrained to the bounds of dayes, not the limits of dayes to them. To instance in particulars. When God himself instituted the seventh day for a Sabbath, because on it he had rested from all his works of Creation; he confined the Sabbath and his rest, to the seventh day; not the seventh day to it: blessing the seventh day and hallowing it; not changing the beginning, ending, limits, or order of it in the week, but the use, Gen. 2. 2, 3. Exod. 20. 7. to 12. When God instituted the fourteenth day of the Moneth Abib, for a Passeover day, in memory of his passing over the Israelites, and sl [...]ying the Egyptians at Midnight, he ordained that Feast to begin at Evening, because the day to which this Festivall was confined, did then begin; not at Midnight, wh [...]n the occasion of its sol [...]mnization happened, Exod. 11. 4. c. 12. 3, 6. 12. 10 40. Lev. 23. 5. Numb. 9. 11. Deut. 16. 4. Josh. 5. 10. So all the other Jewish Feasts began and ended at Evening, as the dayes on whi [...]h they were solemnized did; the limits of the day being the bounds of the Festivalls, not the Festivalls, or their occasions, the boundaries of the day; a Festivall or Holy day being none other, but a common day set apart and dedicated to Gods speciall honour and service: Therefore being but a common day consecrated, must needs begin and end, [...]s the day doth This is manifest by Exod. 12. 18. c. 13.

John 2. 4.
c. 12. 23.
c. 13. 1. c.
 17. 1. 1
Tim. 6. 15.
Rom. 56.
Gal. 2. 4.
 2. 4.

Exod. 12.
 18. Deut.
 16. 3, 4 1.
Sam. 30.
 17.

3, 4. c. 14. 30. c. 35. 2. Levit. 23 3^a to 43. Numb. 29. 1. Josh. 10. 12, 13, 14. Judges 5. 1. 1 Sam. 14. 23. Neh 8, 9, 10, 11. Esth. 8. 12. c. 9. 17, 18, 19, 22. Psalms 81. 3. Psal. 118. 24. Isa. 22. 12. Matth. 28. 1. Mark 16. 1. Luke 23. 56. c. 21. 1. Where [...] all Festivalls, Fasts, and memorable occasions, [Page 65] are regulated by dayes, not dayes by them; the Festivalls and Feasts ever beginning and ending with the dayes to which they are appropriated, not the dayes, or Festivalls, or Fasts, with the occasions of their solemnization. So in all annual or weekly Holy-dayes, Feasts, or Fasts instituted by men, let the occasions of their institution happen what houre or time of the day they will, at morning, noon, or afternoon, yet we still begin the solemnization of them, when the day begins. For Example, our Saviours Passion on the Crosse, was not till about three of the clock in the afternoon, John 9. 14 Mark 15. 34. Yet we solemnise our Goodfriday, in memory of his Passion, from the time the day begins. So our Saviours Ascension (as is probable by Acts 1. 9 10, 11, 12. 13. Luk. 24. 50^a 51, 52.) was about Noon or after, yet we begin the Festivall of his Ascension with the dayes inception, whereon it was. So the descent of the Holy Ghost upon the Apostles in cloven tongues' was about nine of the clock in the morning, Acts 2. 15. Yet we solemnize our Whitsunday in memory thereof, from that dayes inception. Our deliverance from the Gunpowder Treason on the fifth of November, was about nine or ten in the morning, or after, when the King, Queen, Prince, Lords and Commons should have met [...] together in the Lords-house; (though suspected and in part discovered ten dayes before, and actually detected at Midnight;) yet we begin the solemnization of it, from the foregoing Evening, with ringing of Bells, and the like. The Birth of many of our Princes hath been about noon or after, and their Coronations about that time: yet we solemnize their Birth-dayes, and Coronation-dayes, from those dayes beginnings. The Crown descended to our present Sovereign King Charls in the afternoon: yet we solemnize not that day from Noon to Noon, but from Evening to Evening, because the day doth then commence and end, and so the solemnity confined onely to that day, that whole day, not to part of it, and part of the ensuing day. If then all Festivalls whatsoever begin and end with the dayes [Page 66] beginning and end on which they are kept, not at the very time of those dayes, when the occasions of their solemnization happened, as these and other infinite other examples testifie; Why should not the Lords-day begin at Evening, though Christs Resurrection, (the chief cause of its sanctification) was not till morning, because that day, as a day, doth then begin and determine? Certainly whatever the Opposites conceipt, it must needs do so, and that for these unanswerable Reasons.

See 3. Jac.
c. 1. 2. 3.
The arraignment of Traytors.
Speeds History. p.
1254

First, because God himself, at the very Creation hath set inviolable bounds, for the beginning and end of dayes and weeks; appointing them to be as so many Royall Standards for the limiting or measuring out of all Festivall occasions happening on them, and reducing them to a certainty; as I have manifested at large in the fourth Conclusion: wherefore no event or Festivalls, happening on those dayes, can alter the limits or beginning of them, nor make them longer or shorter; no more than the Corn to be measured by the peck or bushell, or the cloth to be measured by the yard, can alter, limit or measure out the quantity of the peck, bushell, or length of the yard.

Secondly, because every occasion that may cause a subsequent consecration of a day, for a Sabbath or Holy day, (and so Christs Resurrection) doth only dedicate that day, yea all that day on which it falls, not part of that day, and part of the day ensuing, on which it did not happen; therefore consecrating onely that very day, all that day, and no other day but that, it must needs begin and end, when that day doth. Now that very day on which our Saviour arose, began and ended at Evening, as I have proved: his Resurrection therefore being the cause of consecrating all that day, (not part of it, and part of the following day) for the Lords-day, this day as a Lords-day, must necessarily begin and conclude at Evening.

Thirdly, because no occasion of consecrating the day on which it falls, extends in point of Consecration, further than [Page 67] that very day, which is set as the utmost limits of it. But should the Lords-day begin and end at morning or Midnight, not at Evening, Christs Resurrection (the cause of its consecration) should extend beyond the bounds of the day, to consecrate half (or at least a quarter) of the second day, for a Lords-day on which he arose; and besides, it should not consecrate all that day on which it happened, but that part onely which ensued, not that which preceded it, since that day began at Evening, as I have proved. Both which were absurd to affirm. Therefore it must needs begin at Evening, The Lords day being onely the first day on which Christ arose, and all the first day, not part of it, and part of the second day, as it is and must be, in the Opposites computation.

Fourthly, that day on which Christ arose, both as a week day, and as a day, was precedent to his Resurrection, both in time, nature, and in the sanctification of it for a Lords-day: For there must be first a day of the week before Christ could rise upon it, or any consecrate it for a Sabbath or Lords-day: therefore his Resurrection on it, and the consecration of it for a Lords-day, did not, could not alter the limits or nature of that day, but both of them must be regulated, squared by its former bounds.

Fifthly, Christs Resurrection and the Lords-day solemnization, have no set limits of time of their own, being no parts of time, but onely measured out by time: therefore they can give, or proportion out, no limits of time to the first day, but the first day being a part of time, must set limits of time to them. And to make Festivalls or their occasions measurers out of the length, beginning or end of days (which the Objectors do) is as grosse an absurdity, as to measure the bush by the corn, or the yard by the cloth; not the corn by the bushell or yard; or as to square the Rule by the tree; measure the quart pot by the wine; weigh pounds and weights by the wool, flesh, bread, fruits; not the tree, wine, wool, &c. by the rule, quart, pound, weights.

Sixthly, every memorable accident happening upon [Page 68] any day (and so by consequence our Saviours Resurrection on the first day of the week) cannot possibly alter the beginning of that day: For if it falls out just at the dayes beginning, it is a reason that the day and Festivall solemnized in memoriall of it, should then begin, because both the day and the occasion of its celebration commence together; if it happen after the day begins (as Christs Resurrection did) it cannot nullifie or change its beginning, because it was irrevocably past, and gone before. Et quod factum, quod praeteritum est, infectum reddi non potest, no not by God himself, much lesse by any accidentall occasion, which cannot possibly operate to nullifie or alter that which was past and gone before it was in being. Since therefore no occasion happening, either with or after the beginning of any day can possibly alter the time of its inception, the Festivity instituted in memory of that occasion, on that day, must inevitably begin and end when the day doth in its naturall and usuall course, and so the Lords-day too, which must begin and end at Evening, because that day on which Christ rose again did so.

Seventhly, Christs Resurrection (and so any other memorable accident upon any dayes) was but a meere transient act, done, past, almost in a moment, or minutes space: wherefore it could properly of it self consecrate onely that space of that day which it took up and no more: for the forepart of the day being past, the following part of it to come, and neither of them in being, but that space thereof in which he rose again, Christs Resurrection could not properly operate to consecrate either the antecedent or subsequent part of that day, of it self, much lesse any dayes ensuing. If therefore the Lords-day, or first day should be limited or bounded out by the time on which Christ rose (which is the Opposites Doctrine) we must either observe no Lords-day at all, or else a Lords-day of a minutes length (and that minute uncertain when to begin or end, because the hour, or minute of Christs rising again is unknown:) Since therefore [Page 69] there is both an expediency and necessity that Christians should observe a day, a Festivall of a greater length, than the very moment in which Christ rose, in memory of Christs Resurrection; the instituters of the Lords day, considering that God himself did ever bound out all Festivalls, by dayes, not minutes, hours or half dayes, (stretching the limits of them farther than the bounds of their occasions reached; which were commonly short, and transitory;) partly in imitation of Gods own former proceedings in such cases, and partl [...] out of necessity, did extend the bounds of the Lords-day beyond the space in which he was rising, even to the intire day, whereon he arose, and so to that part of the day preceding, as well as to that succeeding it, the very act of Christs Resurrection being but momentany and not so large as the whole dayes extent. Whence we may clearly see an absolute necessity of limiting Festivalls by the days, limits, not by their occasions; of beginning the Lords-day at Evening, though the Resurrection, the cause of its future solemnization, was not till morning; and of making such occasions and the Resurrection, to relate à parte ante, as well as à parte post; to consecrate the precedent as well as the subs [...]quent part of the dayes on which they happen, without any violation of the objected Logick Rule. That the effect cannot precede the cause; (which is true onely in this sense, that the Lords-day could not be actually observed as a Lords-day in memory of Christs Resurrection on it, bef [...]re he actually rose again:) else Festivalls and th [...] Lords-day should be scarce half-holy-dayes, sometimes not above a minutes or hours length; which would be dishonourable to God, to Christ, to the Church and disadvantageous unto Christians.

Eightly, if Festivalls or their occasions (and so Christs Resurrection and the Lords-day) should alter the beginning and end of dayes, as the Objectors pretend, it would bring in an absolute confusion of all tim [...]s and dayes: For then every last occasion of solemnizing any day must change the beginning of all other dayes, and reduce them to the time that [Page 70] that occasion happened; and so every punie Festivall should alter the limits of all dayes and Festivalls formerly settled; which were injurious, yea absurd; and would cause so many alterations in day as would render all days, weeks, years, u [...]certain; or else every day or Festival should have severall beginnings and ends, answerable to the hours of the severall remarkable accidents happening on them, some beginning at one hour, some at another, some being long, others short, some beginning at one time in one Country, and at another time in another Countrey; which would bring such a perplexity, intricacy into all computations of time, and all Chronologie, as neither God nor man could suffer; breed much confusion, both in Contracts, Festivals, all divine and humane affairs; overturn Religion, Lawes, Dayes, Weeks, Moneths, years, and reduce all things to a meere uncertainty, in regard of time, which hath continued the same in all ages and places from the Creation to this present, without any variation; the week consisting of seven dayes, and each of those dayes of 24. hours onely, as they did at the Creation. Wherefore to prevent this generall confusion, uncertainty, disorder in dayes, and other times, there is a necessity that dayes, (Gods Standard Royall, to measure all temporary things, occasions, and solemn Festivals happening on them) should limit both Festivals themselves, and the causes of their institution: and so that the Lords-day should be squared by the first day of the week, to which it is confined, not the first day, or Lords-day, by the time of our Saviours Resurrection on it. And why should not the Lords-day be squared by the first day on which our Saviour arose? Is it not celebrated principally in remembrance of his Resurrection on that day? Is not the Lords-day the first day, and the first day the Lords-day? Is not all the fi [...]st day the Lords-day, and no part of the 2^d. day? would you not have it like that first day on which Christ arose, not different from it? If so, then that first day must be the only measure of it; and it must begin and end at Evening, as that day [Page 71] did. If otherwise, you make the Lords-day different from that day whereon Christ rose, you sanctifie but part, not all the first day; you piece up a Lords-day of half the first day and half the second day; and make Christs Resurrection the measure of the day, when as the day was the measure of it: all and either of which is gross [...]ly absurd. You see therefore in the first place, that the ground on which the Opposites build their opinion of the Lords-dayes commencement at morning; is but a ch [...]in of falshoods and notorious errours. And so the objection meereley false, in the sence that they intend it.

2. I answer, that [...]hough Christs Resurrection was the principal cause of Christians celebrating the first day of the week for the Lords-day, & Christian weekly Sabbath; yet it was not the sole cause or occasion of it, there being many other caus [...]s likewise alleadged for it by * ancient and modern Divines and others; as that it was the first day of all others, whereon God created the light, that God rained Manna in the Wildernesse on it, that Christ thereon rose again from the dead, and that the Holy Ghost desc [...]nded thereon, upon the Apostles. Thus expressed in the Excerptions of Egbert Archbishop of York, about the year of Christ 750 c. 36. Spelmanni Concil. Tom. 1. p. 262. Dominica dies prima dies seculi est, & dies Resurrectionis Christi; & dies Pentecosten, & ideo SANCTA EST, &c. And thus in some ancient Saxon Canons, some of uncertain date, yet supposed to be 1000 years after Christ. Ibidem p 600. c. 24. Dies verò Dominica, quia in eo Deus lucem condidit, in eo Mannam eremo pluit, in eo Redemptor humanigenæ spoute pro salute nostra mortuis resurrexit, in eo Spiritum Sanctum super discipulo [...]os infudit, tanta debet esse observantia, ut præter Orationes & Missarum solemnias, & ea quæ ad vescendum pertinent, nihil aliud fiat, &c. On which particulars, many of our modern writers insist. Now as it was the first day of the world whereon light was created, it clearly began at Evening, Gen. 1. 5. The Manna falling on it, [...]el [...] with the dew IN THE NIGHT. Numb, 11. 9 Exod 16 13, 14. Christs [Page 72]

See Augustine
de tempore sermo 251. and 154 D.
Bound of
the Sabbath,
p. 44.

Taken out of Theodulphus his Epistle An. 83 [...]. apud Bo-chellum Decreta Ecclesiae.
Gald. 4.
Tu. [...]0. c.
19. p. 5.
96.

Resurrection thereon was early in the Morning whiles it was yet dark, John 20. 1. Luke 24. 1, 2, 6. Matth. 28. 1. 6. Mark 16. 1, 2. The Descent of the Holy Ghost upon the Apostles thereon; was about nine of the clock in the Morning, or the third houre of the day, Acts 2. 1. to 16. To these Reasons of its sanctifi [...]ation, most of our late Divines annex, Christs apparition to his Disciples on this day after his Resurrection: and that was AT EVENING (a little before Sunset) John 20. 19. Now if all these severall occurrents on the first day of the week, concurring joyntly towards its sanctification as a Lords-day, or Christian Sabbath, should alter its Primitive beginning and end at the Creation, as the first day of the world, when it began and [...]nded at Evening, to the time and hour of these severall Occurrences thereon; it should have as many severall beginnings and ends, at severall times, houres, repugnant to each other; which would make it five severall dayes in stead of one; yea no day at all, but a Monster of dayes and Sabbaths. To reconcile which repugnances, and avoid such confusion; the Objectors must disclaim their confident objected mistake. That Christs Resurrection (being one cause of the Lords-dayes solemnization onely) did actually change the beginning of the day, from Evening to Morning; and grant it still begins at Evening, as before it did.

3. I answer that this Objection is a meere Petitio principii; a begging of the thing controverted, as granted instead of proving

it. For they lay this for a foundation; that Christs very Resurrection did change the beginning of the Lords-day (or first day) on which he arose from Evening to Morning: which is the thing in truth they ought to prove. Yea but they confirm it too as well as say it: How I pray? Christ rose again in the Morning, Ergo he translated the beginning of the day to the Morning. But how is this Consequent made good? why thus: Christs Resurrection was the cause of the Lords-day; Therefore the day must begin when he arose, and not before, for the effect ought not to precede the cause.

I subioyn that in this Argum [...]nt is a treble [Page 89] sophisme.

Fi [...]st there is Fallacia dictiouis in the word cause: which signifieth either an o [...]iginall impulsive cause; (And so it is true that Christs Resurrection was the cause of the Lords dayes solemnization, to wit the cause, why Christians afterwards did solemnize it) or else an immediate efficient consti [...]utive cause: Christs Resurrection was no such cause of the Lords day as I have proved. Yet the Objectors in this Argument make it so, for that is thei [...] meaning. If they take cause here onely in the fi [...]st sence; then the Argum [...]nt is a meere inconsequent; for the original cause or occasion of a thing may in point of time precede the effect for many hundred years. Adams fall w [...]s the cause or occ [...]sion of Christs Incarnation, Passion, Resurrection and Ascension, Rom. 56. to 20. yet these were many thousand yea [...]s puny y [...] it. The three y [...]ars famine in Dauids time, was occasioned by Sauls slaughter of the Gibeonites many years before, 2 Sam. 21. 1. Yea most Divi [...]s generally affirm, that though Christs Resurrection was he occasion or impu [...]sive cause of the Lords-day [...]s i [...]sti [...]ution, yet the institution of it was some space after i [...], not contemporary with it. This Argument therfore is bu [...] a meer incons [...]qu [...]nt Christs Resurrection, the originall occ [...]sion of the Lords day [...]s institution, was in the m [...]ni [...]g. Ergo h [...] L [...]ds day must then begin.

2. Here is [...]ik [...]wise [...] [...]l [...]acie in arguing, that the Lords day m [...]st [...] at Mo [...]ning, not Evening, b [...]cause the eff [...]ct canno [...] p [...]ed [...] the cause; when as the A [...]gument should be [...]st contrary. The [...]ffect begins ever when the [...] it doth; and is ever co [...]tan [...]ious with it; the [...]f [...] t [...] L [...]ds day ought to b [...]gin in the Morning, because [...] R [...]su [...]ction the cause of it b [...]gan then. The fi [...]st [...]f th [...] [...] A [...]uments is a Non sequitur: because thou [...] the ef [...]t cannot precede the cause in naturall things, as the Son cannot be before the Father was; yet it followes not, that the effect should ever be as ancient as, or contemporany with the cause, or the Son be as old as the Fath [...]r, or born together with him. So it follows not that because the [Page 90] Lords day, as a Lords day, could not begin to be observed, hallowed as such a day, before that Morning whereon Christ arose; Ergo it must begin at Morning, and could not be instituted to begin the Evening of the next, or any other first day following it. Again the Antec [...]d [...]nt of the latter Argument is falf, for although the originall cause or occasion doth usually precede the effect in point of time, (as Christs Resurrection did the institution of the Lords day) yet it follows not that the Lords day must begin at that very point of time when Christ arose. So that there is a fallacy in this Argument, in arguing from the effect to the Cause, that it cannot precede it: when as the Proposition ought to be, that it is ever contemporary and must begin at the same time with it.

Thirdly, There is a Transitio à genere ad Genus; and that in two particulars.

1. In making Christs Resurrection the cause of the Lords-day, as it is a naturall day, when as it was no cause of it as a day, but onely the reason why it was instituted for a Lords-day. So that the Argument should be thus propounded. Christs Resurrection was the cause, why the first day was instituted for a Lords-day: but that began at Morning. Ergo, the Lords-day must then begin, because the day must then begin, when the occasion of its institution for a Lords-day began: which I have proved to be false:

2. In applying that to the beginning of the day, which is applycable onely to the beginning of its institution for a Lords-day, in this maxime; that the effect cannot precede the cause, that is, the Lords-day must not be instituted in memory of Christs Resurrection, before Christ was actually risen, (which yet may be false, since the Feast of the Passeover was instituted at Evening, and solemnized in part, before God actually passed over the Israelites, and slew the Egyptians at Midnight following, which was the cause of its institution. Exod. 12. 3. to 40.) and so might the Lords-day too, be instituted in this manner before Christs Resurrection) Therefore after his Resurrection past, it could not be instituted [Page 91] to begin the Evening of that first day of the week on which he arose. Which is a meere inconsequent: For what though Christ did not rise till the Morning; yet that day on which he arose began at Evening; and therefore his Resurrection relating to the whole day, as his Resurrection day, this day of the week (if not before, yet after his Resurrection past) might be well solemnized for a Lords-day, even from Evening to Evening, without any violation of the true meaning of this Maxime; Since we solemnize not the day, as the precise minute or houre, but as the weekly day of his Resurrection, every part whereof may be part of his Resurrection day, though not part of that very hour of the day whereon he arose. If then these Fallacies be abandoned, the whole summe and Force of the Objection, is but this in honest Termes.

Christs Resurrection in the morning was the originall occasion why the first day of the week whereon he arose, was afterwards instituted for the Lords-day, and so solemnized.

Ergo the first day as the Lords-day, must begin and end at morning, at that moment when Christ arose, not at Evening, neither could it be instituted to begin at Even.

Which as all the premises manifest, is a grosse inconsequent.

All that is or can be replied to help out this maimed reason, is this. That the first day whereon Christ arose, had two beginnings. One, as a Lords day, and that Objection. was at morning when he arose: the other as a meer naturall day, viz. at Evening: and that Christs Resurrection, gave it a new beginning, as a Lords-day, not as a naturall day.

To this I answer, 1. That this distinction is but a meer Forgery, warranted by no Scripture, reason or convincing Authority; and therefore it ought first to be proved ere received.

Answer

2. It is but a begging of the Question disputed, not an Answer of the Reasons objected. [Page 92]

[...].

3. It is a meere falshood:

For 1. That very day whereon Christ arose was not consecrated at his Resurrection for a Lords-day, as I have proved: therefore it could not begin at morning as a Lords-day, seeing it was no Lords-day.

2. The Lords-day is nothing else, but the first day of the week, and the first day of the week is the Lords-day, they being terntini convertibiles: therefore they have but one and the self-same beginning and end.

3. That first day, on which Christ arose, even as his Resurrection day, began at Evening as I have proved; therefore it began then, as it was the Lords day, it being the Lords-day onely, as it is his Resurrection day.

4. Had that first day, as a day [...]un at morning, then it must needs be either an half-holy-day, [...]ut of 12 houres long; the Evening and night preceding it, being no patt of it; or else it must be a Lords-day patched up of a piece of the first day, and a part of the second day, to wit, of the day light of the first, and the night of second; and not that intire first day whereon Christ arose. Either of which is an absurdity to averre: therefore as a Lords-day it must begin at Evening, to avoid these absurdities. By all which it is now most clearly evident; that this Grand Objection is both false, absur [...] and fallacious, proving nothing at all against me, and no ground to rely upon.

The third main Argument, to prove, that the Lords-day begins at morning, not at Evening, is that of John 20. 19.

The same day at Evening, being the first day of the Week, when the doores were shut, where the Disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst, &c. whence it may be objected. That the same first day whereon Christ rose again, ended not at Evening; as the words (The same day at Evening, being the first day of the week) import; that Evening being part of the first day, not of the second; therefore it began not at Evening in Saint Johns accompt, and our Saviours Resurrection in it translated its beginning from [Page 93] Evening to Morning.

To this I answer first, that this Text makes nothing at all against me. For the Scripture makes mention of two Evenings; one of the artificiall day (which we commonly call day) beginning when the sund clines, & somewhat [...]efore sunset & ending with the twili [...], or Sun [...]e [...], or when the Evening st [...] begins to shine w^{ch} Evening is a part of the preceding day, both in our [...] usuall and the Scripture Computation, the day Evening when this morning determines. Of which Evening we m [...]y read, Prov. 7. 9. Mark 1. 32. Exod 29 39. [...]t. 23. 11. Judges 9. 9, 11, 14, 16. Josh. 8. 29. c. 10. 26, 27. 2 [...] 3. 37. Ma [...]th. 25. 57. Mark 15. 42. Luke 23. 43, 44. F [...]x [...]d 12. 6. Num. 9. 3. c. 28. 4. and Deut. 21. 23. compared together, which is sometimes stiled Evening tide, Josh. 8. 29 Gen. 24. Gen. 24. 63. Josh 7. 6. 2 Sam. 11. 2. Isa. 17. 14. Judges 19 9. The other is the Evening of the night, beinning after Sun set, or just with the Star-light, just when the twi [...]l [...]ht endeth, and the night and naturall day in the Scripture and J [...]ws accompt begin, which Evening is a part, & the very beginning of the ensuing day: of which we may read, Gen. 1, 5, 8. 13. to 24 31. Exod 3 [...]. 8, Levit. 11. 24. 40. c. 14. 46. c. 15. 5 [...]o 27. c. 17. 15. to 3 [...]. c. 32. 6. c. 23. 32. Numb. 19. 8 10. Deut. 28. 67. Judges 20. 23 26 2 Sam. 1. 12. 1 Sam. 30 17. Prov. 7. 9. Psal. 104. 23. Jer. 6. 4. Hab. 1. 18 Zeph. 2. 7. c. 3. 3. Jer. 5. 6 Neh. 13. 19. Deut. 16. 4. Exod. 12. 6. Levit. 23. 5. Mark 13. 35. compared one with the other. Of both these Evenings we find expresse mention, Exod. 12. 6 Num. 9. 3. and 28. 4. Where the Jews are commanded to kill the Passeover BETWEEN the TWO EVENINGS, that is, as most accord, between the Evening of the day, and Evening of the night; Which space between these two Evenings both we ou [...] selves, and the Scriptures call, Twilight, that is, the space between two lights, to wit, the Light of the Sunne, and the Light of the Starres or Candle-light; or the space between Sun setting and Star-shining; which space most hold belongs to the precedent day; the Evening, which begins the night and following day, really commencing, when the Evening star begins to appear, which Star called VESPER, both denominates, and begins the Evening of the night, and the ensuing naturall day. There being therefore these two Evenings, both in the Scripture computation and our own; the sole [Page 94] Question will be, on which of the Evenings it was, that Christ thus appeared to his Dis [...]iples? and what Evening it is, Saint John here speaks of? Questionlesle, it was the Evening of the day, no [...] of the night: First because the Text is expresse, that it was the same day at Even, being the first day of the week; that is, whiles the first day was yet in being, and before it was quite ended: therefore it was, it must be the Evening of the day, which in the Scripture and Jewish accompt (which Saint John follows) was a part of the prec [...]ding first day; not the Evening of the night, which was in their compute, a parcell

Objection

3. Answer.

1.

S [...]Je
Mat. 14.
15. 25.
Mark 2 6.
35, 36 47,
48. Joh. 6.
16, 17 com
[...]Jared
[...] [...].

The Evening Sacrifices we read of in Scripture, and our Vespers or Evening prayers, are o [...] this Evening of the day, a little before Sun-setting.

Prov. 7. 9.
1 Sam 30
17. 2
Kings 7. 5, 7. Job 24.
15.
Ezechch.
12. 6. 12.

See Neh.
4. 21 Job
3. 9. Jer.
31. 35.
Gen. 1. 1 •
14. 10 19. compared together.

Isiodor Hispa-lensis originum. I of the second day, not of the first; as I have proved.

2. All Divines accord, that this very first day on which Christ arose, and thus appeared to his Disciples, began and ended at Evening, as the third and fifth Conclusions manifest. Therefore this Evening can be no other, but the Evening of the first day, not of the night, since this day, both began and ended when the Evening of the night began.

3. This Text informs us; that when Christ thus appeared unto his Disciples at Evening, he shewed them his hands and his feet, and that they saw and knew him perfectly. Now neither Saint John, nor any other Evangelist make mention of any lights in the room where they were, by which they might see him: therefore it is most probable, that they saw him by day light, or Sunshine, by which they could best of all discern him. And if by day light, (there being nothing in Scripture to controll it) this Evening was questionlesse the Evening of the day before Sunset, as soon as ever the Disciples came all together.

4. Christs love to his Disciples, (who would not absent himself from them long, nor leave them in suspence of the truth of his [...] resurrection, which they heard of before, by relation onely and other evidences) may induce us to believe, [Page 95] that it was the first of these two Evenings, to wit the Evening of the day; and Saint Peters speech to Cornelius, (Acts 10. 40. 41. Him God raised up the third day, and shewed him openly: (there [...] ore at day time, as is likelyest by 1 Sam. 12. 11, 12. c. 16. 22. Psal. 98. 2. Isa. 52. 10. Col. 2. 15.) not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God, even to us, who did eat and drinke with him after he rose from the dead) implies as much. This therefore being the Evening of the day, and so a part of that fi [...] st day, in the Scripture and J [...] ws compute, makes nothing at all against me.

Secondly, This Text mentions not at all this day as a Lords-day, but onely as the first day of the Week whereon Christ rose; neither doth it or any other Scripture inform us, that Christ made any translation of this dayes beginning to the morning. Nor doth it follow, that the day must begin at morning or midnight, because it did not end at that time of the Evening when Christ appeared to his Disciples, for it might determine soon after his appearance (as the words, being the first day of the week subjoyned to the premises seem to infinu [...] te) and so not begin at morning or midnight. This Objection therefore no wayes impairs the truth of my assertion.

3. c. 40.
Cal [...] pi [...]Je, Rabbanus Maurus de universo l.
10. c. 70.
Christianus Gramma-ticu.
Pasca [...]ius Rathb [...]rtus in Matt. 28. v.
1.
Honorius
Aug [...]stodunens [...]s de imagine mundi, l.
2. c. 32

Acts 20. 8.
Makes relation when they had lights of those lights; there [...]Jo [...]Je the Evan [...]elists likewise would have done so, had [...]jere been any, as is most pr [...] - bable.

See Psal.
28 7. to 16.
17.

The fourth Objection (upon which some much rely) is that of Acts 20. 7. to 12. where Paul and the Disciples at Troas continued their Assembly on the first day of the week, till day-breaking, and Paul himself then preached untill Midnight. Ergo The Lords-day begins and ends not at Evening, but at Morning (say some) at Midnight, say others.

Objection 4.

To this I answer, First, that this Ass [...]mbly of theirs on this day began our Saturday nigh [...], not our Sunday, and continued till our Sunday, (not our M [...]nday) morning, as I have formerly proved at large; and therefore it makes wholly for, not against me.

Answer 1.

Secondly, admit this meeting was upon our Sunday at night, (which I would have the Objectors prove, as w [...]ll as affirm) yet it concludes nought against my ass [...]rtion.

First, Because this Sermon of Pauls continuing till midnight, and this their continuance all night together, till the morning, was extraordinary, upon an extraordinary occasion; to wit, Pauls departu [...]e from them the next morning, v. 7. Therefore no Argument to prove the ordinary beginning or end of the Lords-day.

[Page 96]

2. As this Sermon and Assembly was extraordinary, so is it singular, without any pa [...]al [...] example to second it, either in S [...]ipture or antiqui [...]y; which make no mention of any such Sermons or Assemblies used on our Sunday nights, (though of many on our Saturday night, as I have proved) besides this alone, if on it. As therefore one Swallow makes no Summer, so this one singular example makes no President for the usuall beginning and concluding of the Lords-day at Morning or Midnight.

Thirdly, It is abare example but of one Apostle, without any precept to back it; therefore it can be no conclusive proof, that the Lords-day ought to begin at morning or midnight, and he [...] to [...].

Fourthly, The beginning or ending of a S [...]m [...]n, or one publick meeting ([...]ay the co [...]st [...] practis [...] of all Churches and places, from the beginning and ending their publick Lords day exer [...]i [...], which is much more) is no concluding Argument of it self [...] to p [...]v [...] the true beginning and end of the S [...]bb [...]th [...] Lords-day. For the Jews themselves, [...] Christ him [...] [...]nd [...]he Apostles) began their publick S [...]m [...]ns and [...] on the Sabbath day, about eight or nine of the clock in the morning, and concluded them [...]out four or five in the afternoon, as we and all other Churches [...]ow use to begin and end our publick Lords-d [...]es, solemnities: can or will any man ther [...]fo [...]e hence [...], E [...]go, the seventh days: Sabbath and our Lords-day begin not till nine in the morning, and conclude at five in the Evening, because the publick Ass [...]m [...]l [...]s on [...], do then usually begin and determine? N [...] v [...]ily, [...]or this were to make the Seventh day Sabbath and Lords-day, consisting each of them of a naturall day of 24 houres length, not above eight or nine hours long, and scarce so much as half holy dayes; and to abandon all private Sabbath and Lords-dayes duties, in allowing no time at all for them. If then the customary constant cause of our beginning and concluding publick Sermons, with other solemn exercises and Assemblies on the Sabbath or Lords-day, are no sufficient Argument that the Sabbath or Lords-day commence or determine, when these publick Sermons, Exercises, and Assemblies do, much lesse can this extraordinary singular Sermon of Saint Paul continued untill Midnight, or the prorogation of this Assembly at Troas, till the morning, of themselves alone inferre this Conclusion, that the Lords-day begins or ends at Midnight, or morning.

[Page 89]

Fifthly, it appears not by the Text, that Saint Paul preached untill Midnight, and continued this Assembly till day breaking, for this very reason, because the Lords-day ended not till then. There is no such thing as this insinuated by Saint Luke: but the reason of it is plainly expressed to be, Pauls departure from thence the ensuing morning, never to see their faces more: and Saint Lukes drift in recording this Story, is not to signifie, when the Lords-day properly begins and determines; but onely as an Historian truly to relate the Apostles Actions; and to record Pauls industry in preaching upon all occasions; with his love to the disciples at Troas, and their respects to him, and his miraculous restoring Eutychus to life, who fell down dead from the third L [...]ft, whiles he was preaching. Therefore it can be no insallible Argument to prove, that the Lords-day begins or ends at Morning, much lesse at Midnight; since they brake bread, and did eat and communicate together till the morning.

Sixthly, I would demand of the Objectors, when this Assembl [...]y at Troas began? If at Morning or Midnight before: that is improbable, since we cannot imagine, that Paul made a Sermon at that time of 18 or 20 hours long; half of which would have tyred both himself and his Auditors. If not before our Sunday at Evening, as they pretend; then it is a stronger [Page 90] Argument to prove that the Lordsday begins not till Sunday evening; because St. Paul and the Disciples at Troas met not together to solemnize it till then; then that it ends (and so by consequence begins) at morning or midnight, because this Assembly dissolved not till morning, and Paul continued his preaching untill midnight.

Seventhly, If this example conclude any thing positively, for the Objectors, it is onely this; That they should continue their ordinary Lordsday Evening Sermons untill Midnight, and their Assemblies till day breaking; as St. Paul and the Disciples did here. This inference following directly from this example, without any straining; far better then theirs from it doth; that the Lordsday begins and ends at Midnight or Morning. But this inference I suppose they will all disclaim in words, as they do in practice, as being a Nonsequitur; because this example was but singular and extraordinary upon a speciall occasion. Therefore by the self same reason, they must disclaim their present Objections too, or else subscribe to this my inference, which they cannot avoid unlesse they quite renounce their own.

Lastly, its clear St. Paul used to preach both in season and out of season: exhorting Timothy and other Ministers to do the like, 2 Tim. 4. 2. that is, as most interpret it, to preach both upon Lordsdayes, and all other daies and nights too, as he saw occasion. Why then might not his Sermon at Troas begin upon the Lordsday at Evening, about our Evening Sermon time, and yet continue till the Lordsday was past. Certainly, there is no impossibility, nor improbability, but it might so: Since therefore this text of St. Luke informs us onely, that this Meeting and Sermon began upon the First day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread; that the Sermon lasted till midnight, and the Assembly till day break following, without any expression that the Firstday was then continuing or ended; admitting this Assembly and Sermon to be on our Sunday night, (which I absolutly deny) yet it follows not, that the First day ended not in St. Lukes accompt [Page 91] and theirs at Troas, before the Sermon or Assembly concluded. So that this example proves nothing at all for the Opponents Thesis, nor any thing against mine, for which it is a concluding evidence, if rightly understood, as I have formerly manifested.

The 5. Objection, for the Lordsdayes beginning at morning, and against its Evening commencement, is this. That the beginning of it at Evening, would open a wide Objection gap to all licentiousnes, Pastimes, Disorders, on [...] Lordsday after-noons, and likewise to secular employments unsuitable to the day; which the beginning of it at morning would prevent.

To this, I answer. First, that this Objection is a meer Cavill: For we see by wofull experience, that the Doctrine of the Lordsdays beginning in the Morning (which is Answer and hath been generally received of late years in most places of the Kingdome) hath no wayes prevented, remedied any of the Abuses, objected, on Lordsday Evenings, which dissolute persons, who make no consci [...]nce of sanctifying all the day, will alike prophane, and all godly people equally sanctifie, let the day begin and end at Evening, at Sunset, or Starshining: And there are none who out of Conscience sanctifie and forebear to prophane them now, but would equally sanctifie those Evenings too, did they believe the day to conclude at Evening, since they would be sure to sanctifie all the day. This objected mischief therefore is but a pretence.

Secondly, It is clear that God himself commanded his seventh day Sabbath, and other Solemn F [...]stivals, to be solemnized from Evening to Evening. Exod. 12. 18. Levit. 23. 32. God therefore (infinitely wise foreseeing better than the best, wisest, holiest and most prudent Christian Magistrates or Ministers all inconveniences, abuses that might prophane his Sabbath, and what beginning, conclusion of it would best prevent all prophanations, and make most for its sanctification) instituting hi [...] Sabbath and other Festivals to begin and end at Evening, not at morning or mid-night; I may safely [Page 92] inferre (against this present Objection) that this beginning, concluding the Lordsday at Evening, even in Gods accompt, and so in verity it self, is least inconvenient, least mischievous, and the best of all the three to prevent all prophanations, abuses of the day: Therefore it ought to be imbraced, as that which God himself hath prescribed for the best, the meetest of all others.

Thirdly, I have formerly proved, that this beginning of it at Evening, doth best prepare men for its sanctification; that it prevents more prophanations, Abuses of it committed on and occasioned by disorders of all sorts on the Saturday night (as we falsly term it) then it could possibly produce on Lordsday Evenings: To which I shall adde, that it likewise excuseth all Husbandmen, Tradesmen and others from being Sabbath-breakers; who in the Winter quarters, rise early to their weekly labour on Munday morning, some three or four hours before day-break; who should be Sabboath breakers in an high degree, if the sabbath or Lordsday ended not til day breaking, as some Objectors pretend. Therefore I may conclude, that this beginning of the Lordsday at Evening, make more for the sanctification of the day, and prevents more inconveniences, then that at morning, and so ought to be retained.

Fourthly, This beginning and concluding the Lordsday at Evening, cannot any way produce such effects of licentiousnesse, and prophanenesse on Lordsday Evenings as is suggested; since it puts no period to the Lordsday or its duties, till after Sunset, when the Stars begin to shine; which is not till eight or nine of the clock in the Summer, when all orderly people, families are more ready to betake themselves to their family duties, private devotions and rest, then to Sports or Pastimes: and about six a clock in the Winter quarter; after which all civill orderly Parents, Masters, (though not religious) permit not their Children or Servants to rove abroad; and such who are truly pious, fall to repetition of the Sermons they heard the Lordsday before, singing of Psalms, reading the Scriptures and godly Books, Catechising their families, Prayer, [Page 93] Meditations, and such like holy family duties, answerable to the piety they professe, and the holinesse of the preceding day. So that it gives no liberty at all to any dishonest unchristian Sports or meetings, as is pretended, which commonly break up and end ere the Lordsday concludes in this accompt, and which all good Christians ever avoid at all times, especially after Lordsday exercises of Piety and Religion, with which they have no anologie.

Lastly, Admit the objection true, that this beginning of the Lordsday at Evening should prove more inconvenient then that at morning; not simply in it self, but in regard of mens abusing it; which yet I deny; yet it follows not, that therefore the day ought then to begin; since the abuse of any Doctrine, through the corruption of men, makes not the Doctrine lesse true; and since Inconvenien [...]es must not, cannot alter those bounds, which God himself hath immutably prescribed unto dayes. True it is, that inconveniencies backed with any precepts or scripture for the beginning of dayes are good Arguments, proofs of truths; but wanting Scripture authority to enforce them or being objected against apparent texts, they are no ways conclusive. Such are the inconveniences here pretended, which whether they will happen, yea or no, will not, canno, appear, till this Doctrine of the Lordsdayes commencing at Evening, and the use of publique Evening Prayers in all places Saturday Evenings, as a preparative to the Lordsday Sanctification formerly used, be generally received as formerly: which men will not so much abuse to Liberty and Licentiousnesse, as is pretended; or if they do, the fault is onely theirs, not the Doctrines. Wherefore my Conclusion remains still firm, notwithstanding this Objection.

The Sixt and last Objection is this: That many godly Learned Divines of late and present times, have in their Writings, Sermons, delivered this Opinion for a truth; That the Lordsday begins and ends at morning, not at evening; because Christ rose not till the Morning; and it is now the common received opinion, practice of all our Divines and most private Christians. Therefore questionlesse, it is the truth, and dangerous to alter it in Thesis or Practice.

Objection

6.

[Page 94]

To this I answer. First, That it is true, many reverend holy learned late Divines (whose names for honours sake I shall forbear to mention) have in their publique Writings, and many more in their Sermons; delivered this opinion (yet many of them only dubiously with an IT SEEMETH or IT IS PROBABLE, or LIKELY, not resolutely) and that their present practice is answerable thereunto: But yet all the learned Godly Christians in all former ages have held, practiced the contrary, as I have proved; and some godly eminent Divines among us now, conclude in judgement with them. The judgment therefore and practise of all Ages, Churches, from the Apostles time till now, should rather sway the ballance of this controversie, then these few late Divines, though learned and judicious.

Answer 1.

S [...]cut autem Sabbathi veteris initium suit à vesp [...]re: quia & crea [...]io inci-piebat à vespre, quoniam Massa communis creata fuit ante lucem: & cessatio diei ab opere creationis incipiebat etiā à vespere; sic Diei Dominicae initium incipere videtur ab illius diei mune: quia resuri [...]ctio Christi suit in primo mane. Mar.

Secondly, Most of those godly learned men have taken up this Opinion, and published it to others upon Wolphius his Authority and ground, without any full examination or serious study of the point, as appears by this, that they do but lightly touch it in the by and so away, not seriously or peremptorily resolving it, grounding themselves upon such reasons as no wayes prove their Conclusion; and in truth are meerly fals, in that sense they understand them, as I have largely manifested in the premises. Therefore their Authorities are not so much to be regarded.

Thirdly, In all Disputes we must not so much observe what and who the Authors produced are, as what their proofs and reasons are. If these good learned mens Arguments, Reasons be unsound, as I have manifested them; no matter what their Opinions, lives or practises are; since the learnedest, the holiest are and may be subject unto Errours, from which none are exempted. Seeing therefore I have here propounded the best Reasons alledged on all hands, for the Sabbath and Lordsdayes beginning, at Evening, Morning, Midnight, let the best Proofs, Reasons win the field; and then I hope the victory will fall on my side without any more Dispute, who contend not for victory, but truth alone.

[Page 95]

Having thus (as I conceive) given full satisfactory answers to all materiall Objections, I ever yet read, heard, or conceive against the Lords-days beginning at Evening; I come now to reply to one grand Exception against that place of Levit. 23. 32. From Evening to Evening y [...]u shall celebrate your Sabbath; a principall Text to prove, that the seventh day Sabbath, (and so our Christian Lords-day or Sabbath as it is called) ought to begin and end at Evening.

To which some reply, that this Text speaks onely of the Sabbath of attonement, which was but Ceremoniall; not of the seventh day Sabbath; therefore it is no Argument or Proof at all, that the seventh day Sabbath, or Lords-day succeeding it, should begin and end at Evening.

To which I reply, First, that it is true; this Text is meant more particularly of the Sabbath of attonement, to which it is here specially applyed, but yet it extends withall to the seventh day Sabbath, (which all confesse did ever begin, and end at Evening) from whence it received both its name of Sabbath, and its limitation too, both for the manner and time of its sanctification, as is clear by verse 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32. compared together.

For 1. This Sabbath of Attonement, was to be a Sabbath, and so the same in appellation, as the seventh day Sabbath, verse 27, 28, 32.

2. It was to be but a Sabbath of one dayes space, and no more; (to wit, the tenth day of the seventh moneth, verse 27.) as the seventh day Sabbath was.

3. It was to be sanctified and solemnized in the same manner, as the seventh day Sabbath.

For 1. It was to be an holy Cnnvocation unto them, v. 27. (that is, they must meet, and keep publick, religious, holy Assemblies on it, & do holy duties) as the seventh day Sabbath was, verse 2, 3.

2. They must rest and do no manner of work upon it, verse 28, 30, 31, 32. as they were commanded to do on the seventh day Sabbath, Exod. 20. 9. 10 c 23. 12. c. 31. 15. c. 35. 2. D [...]ut. 5. 13, 14, 15. neither might themselves, or the strangers within their gates do any work thereon, Levit. 16 29. as they might n [...]t do on the seventh day Sabbath, Exod. 20. 10, 11.

3. They must offer a burnt offering to the Lord on this Sabbath, verse 27. as they were to do every seventh day Sabbath, Numb. 2 [...]. 9, 10.

4. This Sabbath of Attonement was, to cleanse them from all their sins before the Lord, and make them holy, Levit 16. 31. as the seventh d [...]y Sabbath was both a means and sign of Gods fanctifying them, Exod. 31. 13. Ez. ch. 20. 22.

5. He that did any work on this Sabbath of Attonement, was to be cut off from his people, verse 30 as he was to be, that did any work on the seventh day Sabbath, Exod. 31. 14, 15. Num. 15. 32, 35, 36.

6. On this Sabbath of Attonement, they must afflict their souls, v. 27. 32. as on th [...] seventh day Sabbath they were to do, though not so solemnly as on this, by confessing their sinnes, and by not doing their own wayes, nor finding or doing their own pleasure thereon, Isa. 58. 13. By all which particulars, it is manifest, that this Sabbath of Attonement was in most things most exactly squared, regulated by the seventh day Sabbath, as the Sampler by the Copy, or the picture by the person drawn, participating with it both in its name, use, sanctification; The sole Querie or doubt remaining to be cleared, is when all this is to be done, or at what time of the day, this Sabbath of Attonement should begin and end? God therefore resolves this scruple in the words alledged, From Even to Even shall ye rest (or celebrate) your Sabbath; that is in eff [...]ct, you shall keep it from Evening to Evening, as you do the seventh day Sabbath; which begins and ends at Evening: so that the seventh day Sabbath, being here propounded for the onely pattern by which this Sabbath of Attonement was squared, and this being to begin and end at Even, because the seventh day Sabbath did, as all acknowledge, and I have [Page 97] prov [...]d; this Text (in my conceit) is a pregnant unavoidable Argument: for the seventh day Sabbaths solemnization from Evening to Evening, as well as for the Sabbath of Attonements, beginning and concluding at Evening: whence Saint Augustine with sundry Councels, and Authorities forequoted, apply this Text to the seventh day Sabbath, and Lords-day, as setting out bounds to them, as well as to the Sabbath of Attonement.

2. I answer, that this Sabbath of Attonement was confined to the tenth day of the seventh moneth, verse 27. and to be kept upon that day: since therefore it was confined to that very day, and to be solemnized from Evening to Evening; it is apparant that that day, as a naturall day, began and ended at Even in Divine accompt; and if that day, as a naturall day, began and ended at Even; then by consequence all other dayes, (being all of one proportion, and one ever beginning when the other ends) began and ended at Evening. Therefore the seventh day Sabbath too, appropriated to the seventh day: So that take it which way you please, it is an unavoidable proof, that all Sabbath dayes, and the seventh day Sabbath begin and end at Evening in Divine Computation: therefore the Lords-day must do so too, being a Sabbath of sacred rest, as all our Opposites resolve, and confined to the first dayes limits, which as a naturall day commenceth, and determines onely at Even, in naturall, divine and true accompt, and as a sacred day of P [...]est, [...] denoted to Gods service, I have now as succinctly, and perspicuously as I could waded through this present Controversie: At what time the Lords-day ought to begin and end? and if my Judgement fail me not, I conceive I have sufficiently manifested it to commence and conclude at Evening, (immediately after Sunset, or so soon as the Eveningstar begins to appear) not at morning or midnight. If the Truth shall prove on my side upon the debate, I desire it may captivate the contrary mistakes, and certifie both the judgement and practise of all such zealous Christians who are yet differently minded. If the error be on my side (as I am yet fully resolved it is [Page 92] not) I shall be glad to be first informed, then reformed by men of graver judgements, desiring a to do nothing against, but for the truth, for which I shall ever contend, to which I shall ever subscribe; reputed it my greatest felicity to conquer with it, or to be conquered by it, and if occasion require to suffer chearfully, gladly for it.

▪ [...] Cor.
13. 8.

FINIS.

Errata.

PAGE 2. l. 3, 4. at Evening. in pag. 10. l. 34. dele may, pag. 12. l. 10. dele but part. pag. 21. l. 6. r. is. l. 36. read quality. pag. 23. l. 29. dele the l. 36. naturall. pag. 25. l. 36. r. of. p. 26. l. 13. applicas. l. 21. r. Summa. l. 33. Cordubiensis. l. 36. Covarravias. p. 27. l. 21. pauper. l. 26. totaliter. l. 31. r. assert. p. 28. l. 3. r. commanding. p. 31. l. 11. ages. p. 37. l. 24, r. ei [...]. p. 44. l. 12. r. noctem. p. 50. l. 32. ventre. p. 54. l. 30. dele vesperam p. 58. (R.) l. 29. most come in. l. 25. before transcendent. p. 61. l. 28. For God. p. 26. l. 19. r. course. p. 63. l. 5. Such thing. p. 64. l. 10. be contemporary. l. 37. first day.

In the Margin. p. 7. l. 3. Smalta. p. 12. l. 19. hathertus. p. 15. l. 5. Neh. 4. 21. p. 16. l. 3. r. Fulk. p. 22. l. 22. Rastal. p. 31. l. 16. certo Doctoque. p. 34. l. 27. Apoc. p. 43. l. 2. r. ux [...]rem p. 45. l. 9. Gustodunensis. l. 11. Bibl. patr. p. 60. l. 25. r. Serm [...]. p. 61. 14. praecipuum.

[Page]

This keyboarded and encoded edition of the work described above is co-owned by the institutions providing financial support to the Text Creation Partnership. This Phase I text is available for reuse, according to the terms of Creative Commons 0 1.0 Universal. The text can be copied, modified, distributed and performed, even for commercial purposes, all without asking permission.